INTRODUCTION.

It is now more than thirty years since the writer began to gather information respecting the name of Pitkin; but not until the year 1862, when meeting Mr. O. C. Pitkin, principal of the High School, Chelsea, Mass., who also had a valuable manuscript of his family and other branches, and adding to these an early manuscript, compiled by the Rev. Caleb Pitkin, formerly of New Hartford, Conn., did it become possible to obtain such information as would warrant an attempt at publication.

In 1864-5 hundreds of genealogical blanks were mailed to Pitkins, and Pitkin mothers, settled in most of the States and territories.

To many of them I am indebted for prompt and complete records of their families and relatives, while of others of the family it has taken years of time and no small amount of perseverance to ascertain their whereabouts, together with no small expense for printing, postage, and traveling expenses.

In no case has a possible clue been abandoned, although many dates are wanting; necessarily so, from the loss of early records, both of church and town, and others from neglect in answer.

Many seeming discrepancies of one year in dates will be readily accounted for by "Old and New Style," as previous to 1750, and even later, the Puritan year commenced with March 25th. Consequently all dates occurring in January, February, and March may have been credited to either year. These dates I have entered as I received them. That there are no mistakes in this book, I cannot for one moment hope, especially as persons giving their own age vary it from one to three years, undesignedly, when writing a second time. Several members of the same family often give as many different dates for the same occurrence.

Some writer has very aptly said, "he who has any pride of accuracy or promptness, has only to write a genealogy to have this conceit removed."

In answer to some who have asked, why it has taken so long to bring out the genealogy, I would say that with a large business to attend to, I have been unable to give the book any attention during business hours. The many thousand letters written and the writing up of this work has been done nights, covering a period of many years. Again, it must be remembered that this is not a record of one branch only, or a partial record, like many genealogies, but a record of the whole Pitkin family in America, some of which it has taken years to find.

We feel warranted in saying that few genealogies of nine generations, extending over a period of more than two hundred years, are more complete.

We believe no Pitkin in this country connected with the family has ever attained the age of maturity whose name does not appear in this record.

I here most cordially acknowledge my indebtedness to those who have so kindly assisted me in this work.

Firstly, to my friend, Mr. O. C. Pitkin, who has spent months in arranging and copying most of the names in the record. We cannot be too thankful for the forethought and trouble of the Rev. Caleb Pitkin in leaving a manuscript record of the early generations.

My grateful acknowledgments for assistance rendered are especially due the following persons, viz.: Mrs. Captain James Pitkin, East Hartford, Conn.; Mrs. Nathan Pitkin, East Hartford, Conn.; Mrs. Dr. Edward Pitkin, East Hartford, Conn.; Mrs. Ozias Pitkin, East Hartford, Conn.; Mrs. Chauncey Treat, East Hartford, Conn.; Mrs. S. L. Pitkin, Boston, Mass.; Mrs. Sarah Pitkin Baldwin, Boston, Mass.; Mrs. Lucy Ellis Sanford, Washington, D. C.; Mrs. Hiram Denio, Utica, N. Y.; Mrs. William Pitkin, Rochester, N. Y.; Miss Sarah B. Pitkin, Rochester, N. Y.; Mrs. Alonzo Aston, New Britain, Conn.; and to my daughter, Mrs. A. H. Pitkin, for great assistance in researches and copying. Also to Mr. Ezekiel Pitkin, East Hartford; Captain John Pitkin, East Hartford; Mr. Charles Pitkin, "Humorist," East Hartford; Mr. Charles H. Olmsted, Genealogist, East Hartford; Rev. Dr. Thomas C. Pitkin, Detroit, Mich.; Mr. John R. Pitkin, East New York, N. Y.; Mr. William M. Stanley, East Hartford; Mr. J. O. Goodwin, East Hartford; Dr. H. K. Olmsted, Hartford; Deacon Horace Pitkin, Manchester, Conn.; Mr. Walter Pitkin, Washington, D. C.; Ira Anderson, East Hartford; Mr. C. J. Hoadly, Historian and State Librarian; and to my son, Mr. A. H. Pitkin, who has photographed the negatives for every picture in the book, taken from life and from daguerreotypes, photographs, miniatures, crayons, and paintings, which were so kindly loaned to me by their respective families; and of the monuments, street views, falls, and manufactories, taken at the various places. From these negatives have been produced the entire artotypes for this book by Mr. Edward Bierstadt, of New York, to whom I am greatly indebted, for kindness and courtesy. And to each and all who have contributed to this work. Abundant evidences will be seen throughout this work of references to the following: the manuscripts of Rev. Caleb Pitkin, O. C. Pitkin, General S. L. Pitkin, Dr. Thomas C. Pitkin, and Timothy Pitkin. Records, State Library, Hartford, Conn.; Records, Congressional Library, Washington, D. C.; Records, War Department, Washington, D. C.; Town Records, Hartford, East Hartford, and other towns. Military Records, East Hartford; Colonial Records, Church Records, College Records, Barber's "Connecticut," Goodwin's "Genealogical Notes," Scaeva's "Hartford in Ye Olden Time," Goodwin's "East Hartford," Johnston's "Genesis of a State," Bacon's "Ecclesiastical History," "Historical and Genealogical Register." Pitkin's "United States History," DeForest's "Connecticut Indians," Dr. Allen's "Biographical Dictionary," Theodore D. Woolsey's "Academical Degrees," various genealogies and several speeches. I have endeavored to give credit for all information except in the case of records.

INTRODUCTION.

Aside from the many annoyances incident to preparing a work of this kind, it has left many pleasant memories both from correspondence and from new friendships in the family.

The most gratifying remembrance will always be the willingness with which some fifteen of the family responded to a call for one hundred dollars from each, toward publishing the book. It was a generous response! I trust it will be remembered by the whole family, as it materially reduced the price of the book and brings it within the reach of some who could not well afford to pay for the large number of illustrations and portraits.

Should this book meet with your approval, I shall be more than repaid for a work that I had never intended personally to write.

HISTORICAL NOTES.

CHAPTER I.

THE NAME IN ENGLAND.

“And Simon he surnamed Peter.”—Mark iii, 16.

Previous to the use of surnames, which were not generally assumed in England until about 1070 A.D., and were then introduced by the Normans under William the Conqueror, the name of the next in kin or generation was designated by an affix to the sire name, as Peter-kin, from Peter, the parent name, which gave birth to a long list of family names by affix and suffix.

The following extract from M. A. Lower's “Patronymica Britannica” (2119 d, British Museum), gives the following derivations from the parent name, Peter: Petre, Peters, Peterkin, Pitkin, Peterken, Peterson, Peterham, Pierce, Pierson, Perkin, Perkins, and others.

The name of Pitkin is an abbreviation or derivation of Peterkin, which is kin to Peter.

The records of Hertfordshire, Eng., bear witness that the name Pitkin is an honorable one, and has been a prominent one from the thirteenth century, a number of the family having held appointments under the several sovereigns.

The royal borough of Berkhamsted, St. Peters, Hertfordshire, appears to have been the home of the Pitkins at an early date.

In A.D. 1524, Henry VIII founded a free grammar school here, and endowed it with lands belonging to the dissolved monastery of the fraternity of St. John the Baptist. (Lewis' Topographical Hist., 2061 d, British Museum.)

William Pitkin was its sixth school-master. He was buried in St. Dunstons, Fleet street.

It appears to have been a town of considerable importance. Clarke's Geographical Dictionary, Vol. I (2056 f, British Museum), says, on the north side of the town are the remains of a castle which was once the residence of the kings of Mercia. In this town a Parliament was held in A.D. 697, when Ina's laws were published. Here William the Conqueror swore to maintain the laws of his predecessors; and here Henry II. for a while held his court. The children of James I. were likewise nursed here. In 1619, it was made a corporation.

In the original charter granted by James I. (long known as one of the most beautiful Latin manuscripts in existence, and still preserved in the British Museum) Willielmum Pitkin generosum (gentleman) is named as one of the first burgesses. He was also returned to Parliament in 1628 as Chief Burgess.

By the will of Charles I., A.D. 1626, he gave £ s 100 to supply the poor of Berkhamsted with firing; and William Pitkin (gentleman), Edward Kellett, and two others were bound to the King in exchequer for security for the money; and the other persons, except Pitkin, in discharge of their respective bonds, charge their estates for security thereof. (Clutterbuck's History of Hertfordshire, page 307.) We also find that William, Francis, and other Pitkins are frequently named as burgesses and bailiffs of the old town. Mr. Timson, its present clerk, says the name Pitkin appears frequently for many years, in the registry of births and deaths.

On examination of some forty directories, covering the past hundred years, the following Pitkins are mentioned in the various places :

Harvey Pitkin, Aldenham Road, Bushey, Hertfordshire.

George Pitkin, High street, Hemel Hempstead.

George Pitkin, 10 Holywell Hill, St. Albans.

Charles Pitkin, 30 High street, Tring.

John Pitkin, 48 Albert road, Dalston, E. Middlesex.

Mrs. Pitkin, Holiday street, Berkhamsted, Hertfordshire.

James William Pitkin, Ravens lane, Berkhamsted, Hertfordshire.

Joseph Pitkin (father of James William, died in 1864, aged 71 years).

Thomas Pitkin (grandfather of James William). Aldbury.

Richard Pitkin (brother of Joseph), Uxbridge.

Mrs. Pitkin, Moorsley, near Aylesbury.

Also from P. O. Directory of London, E. Pitkin & Son, Lever street.

John E. Pitkin, Crisp street, Poplar E.

George Pitkin, Lever street, E. C.

George Pitkin, Upper Charles street, E. C.

William Pitkin, Hare street, Bethnal Green, N. C.

Mrs. Lucy Pitkin, Pen street, Bridport Place, Hoxton.

James Pitkin, Red Lion street, Clerkenwell, E. C.; manufacturer of philosophical and scientific instruments, our London cousin, presumably a descendant of Roger Pitkin, to whom we are indebted for much transatlantic information, he having employed a very reliable person to examine thousands of volumes in numerous libraries for desirable information; he has refused all remuneration for time, library fees, or traveling expenses, which must have been no inconsiderable sum. For his interest in the matter he most assuredly will receive the thanks, and ever be remembered by the entire Pitkin family.

The foregoing names were found in Hertford, London, and vicinity, but the family is traceable over portions of Europe and the West Indies, irrespective of the American branch.

We found the name of Pitkin in Naples, a wealthy oil merchant having settled there after a successful career as captain of a merchant ship. He was formerly from London. He also had a brother, a merchant in Rome.

There was also a Pitkin, a merchant, in Constantinople, and also a family in Germany.. One of its descendants, Peter Pitkin, some years since, came to

JAMES PITKIN OF LONDON, ENG.

America and settled at Rochester, N. Y., and has since carried on a large business in stone cutting and monuments.

I also found that James Pitkin went from Bethnall Green, London, about 1790, and married and settled in the West Indies in 1801, and had a family of seven children. Some of the grandchildren are now living at Jamaica, W. I.

“ Now tell us what ’twas all about,
 Young Peterkin, he cries,
 And little Wilhelmine looks up
 With wonder-waiting eyes;
 Now tell us all about the war
 And what they killed each other for ! ”

— Battle of Blenheim, on the Danube, 1704.

In Chambers' Index to "Next of Kin," found in the City Library, London, Eng., the following names are found, which have been advertised for in the past one hundred and fifty years: George Pitkin, Hannah Pitkin, John and Thomas Pitkin, and Richard Pitkin. Also in a book of names of unclaimed dividends, in the Bank of England, the names of several Pitkins occur between the years 1756 and 1758.

One of the earliest Christian names in the history of the family was William, apparently a favorite one, continuous through all the generations in the mother country, and was the name of the first Pitkin in this country. This name occurs more than fifty times in the nine generations in America, and usually without a middle name. The early generations were not a polyonymous family, but the later generations are much given to prenomen, in some instances to the extent of four names.

Of the father of William Pitkin, the progenitor of the name in America, little is known. That William left a brother Roger, in London, a military officer in the King's service, is fully attested by the words of greeting of the sister Martha, on meeting her brother, whom she had followed to America, some two years later. (See Martha Pitkin Wolcott.)

Also by the following verbatim letter written by Walter Barnesley of London, in A.D. 1667, to William Pitkin, in America.

LETTER OF WALTER BARNESLEY OF LONDON, TO WILLIAM PITKIN OF HARTFORD, 1667.

The original of the following letter is now in the possession of the writer. It is addressed as follows:

CHAPTER II.

COATS OF ARMS.

“Every man of the children of Israel shall pitch by his own standard, with the ensign of their father's house; far off about the tabernacle of the congregation shall they pitch.”—Numbers ii, 2.

Coats of arms as heraldic emblems can be traced to the beginning of the thirteenth century, and, with various modifications, have been in use in most of the European countries. Robson's British Herald, Vol. 2; Berry's Cyclopedia Heraldica, and other works give several coats of arms of both Scotch and English, four of which are here blazoned:

Peterkin,

I. Peterkin. — [Scotland]

'Or., 'an eagle with two heads displayed, gu.,

Crest, a unicorn's head or.,

Motto, Confido in Domino.

II. Peterkin. — [Scotland]

'Ar., 'an eagle displayed with two heads, 'per fess gu., and sa.,

Crest, a unicorn head.

Motto, Confido in Domino.

III. Peterkin. — [England]

'Ar., 'an eagle displayed with two heads, per fess' az., and sa.,

Crest, a dove, ppr.,

Motto, Confido in Domino.

IV. Peterkin. — [England]

'Ar., 'an eagle imperial, per fess' gu., and sa.,

Crest, a dove, ppr.,

Motto, Confido in Domino.

Two of the above Blazons, Nos. II and IV, are here depicted.

PITKIN COAT OF ARMS.

Whitmore, in his “Elements of Heraldry,” says: “Coats of arms were frequently used in New England during the colonial period, and it is probable they were used in the rest of the original thirteen colonies. These arms are worthy of preservation, since they are valuable evidence for the genealogist. At the date when they were in use in New England the English rules were in force here. The time since the settlement of the country was not so long as to forbid the acceptance of traditions as evidence. We may believe that those who displayed armorial insignia had good ground for their adoption.

The following coat of arms was taken from a seal impression, owned by one of the descendants of Gov. William Pitkin, who is said to have used it.

It is well authenticated as having been used as the Pitkin coat of arms for several generations, and several copies of it are now in different branches of the family, dating back to 1700 and 1750 A.D. But, if it was ever conferred, and when, I am unable to say, as I do not find it in the books of heraldry, but give it as taken from the various copies extant.

Suffice it to say that nothing that royalty could confer would add lustre to the name, especially of the early generations of this country.

In describing a coat-armor it is often divided into five parts as follows: the shield, the crest, the helmet, the motto, and the supporters (used by knights and peers). The Pitkin coat of arms may be described as follows:

Shield or Escutcheon — Tincture, azure.

Bend — One of the honorable ordinaires formed by drawing parallel lines from the dexter chief to the sinister base points. It denotes military service. Tincture, argent.

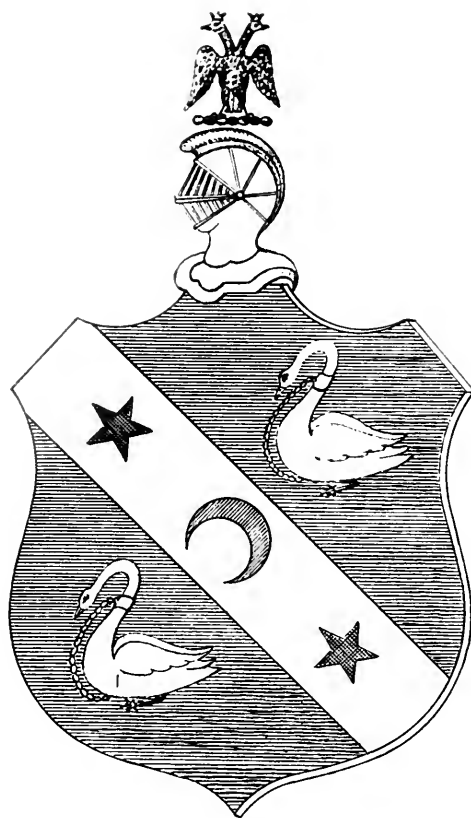

Swans — Denotes learning. Collared and chained denotes bearing. Tincture of swans, argent. Tincture of collar and chain, or.
Charges on bend.

Increscent — First adopted by Moorish commanders at the invasion of Spain. Tincture, gules, denoting courage.

Mullets — Five-pointed star, or rowell shape; a filial distinction of the third son. Tincture, sable.

Helmet — In profile, vizor down designates an esquire. Tincture, or. and argent.

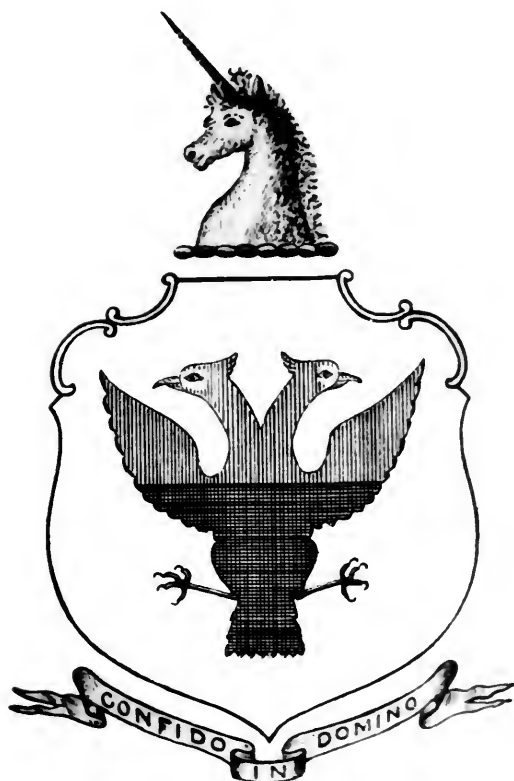

Crest — An imperial eagle, ppr.

THE NAME IN AMERICA.

"These mentioned by their names were princes in their families."—I Chron. iv, 38.

Among the descendants by the name of Pitkin may be found a United States Senator, three members of Congress, and State Senators, a Speaker of the House, forty members of the House and Senate, two Attorney-Generals, three Judges of Supreme Court, and several Judges of County and Probate Courts, several D.D.'s, an LL.D., several Colonial Commissioners, a trustee of the Hartford Theological Seminary, Fellows of College Corporation, a founder of the Western Reserve College, thirty clergymen, and numerous deacons; two generals and a Quartermaster-General, six Colonels, and numerous Major Commanders; three graduates of West Point, an Engineer-in-Chief, a United States Marshal, two Governors, a Lieutenant-Governor, five members of the Governor's Council, several on Councils of Safety and Councils of War. One historian of the United States, mayors, water commissioners, and bank presidents, surgeons in the U. S. Navy and Army, a number of physicians, lawyers, and college graduates,—not to mention here many other important trusts conferred upon various members of the family; some of which will be mentioned in their several biographical and historical sketches.

From William's sister, Martha Pitkin Wolcott, are also descended five Governors of Connecticut, and other eminent men. (See Wolcott "Memorial.")

We hope to give elsewhere the names of prominent men connected with the family through their maternal ancestry, and trust we may be pardoned for mentioning the fact that twenty of the daughters of Pitkins married clergymen, and ten of the sons of Pitkins married daughters of clergymen; adding to these thirty the thirty ministers before mentioned, we find sixty clergymen directly or nearly connected with the family.

Mr. J. O. Goodwin, in his "History of East Hartford," says (p. 225): "Seldom is it the fortune of any family to have numbered so many individuals raised to places of distinction in the affairs of a State, by their own abilities, as in the case of the Pitkin family of Hartford, East Side. No other family in our commonwealth stood so constantly and for so long a time in the front of current events, unless it were the Wolcott * family of Windsor, which was also remarkable for its number of prominent men."

* Martha Pitkin, sister of William, was the maternal ancestor of these prominent men in the Wolcott family. (See Martha Pitkin Wolcott.)

"From 1659 to 1840, and later, the Pitkins were conspicuously represented in our Church, Town, and State Governments, as well as in our military affairs and intercolonial relations."

Dr. Allen, in his account of the "Lives and characters of the most eminent persons deceased in North America, from its first settlement," mentions the names, among others, of

From the charter of the Connecticut Colony, in 1662, to its formation as a State, in 1776, and the adoption of the Constitution of the United States, in 1788, until 1812, a period of one hundred and fifty years, the Colony was annually represented by a member of the Pitkin family in the Assembly of the Colony, or the Governor's Council, or in the Governor's chair, and the State, in the House or in the Senate, and in the Speaker's chair. This representation continued with but few omissions till 1842, a period of one hundred and eighty years. We question if a parallel case can be cited in the history of any family in any State.

CHAPTER IV.

MR. WILLIAM PITKIN.*

"When the genealogy of their generations was reckoned."—I. Chron. v, 7.

Mr. William Pitkin, the progenitor of the family in America, came from London, England, in 1659, where he left a sister Martha and a brother Roger.

It is not known if they had parents living; presumably not, from the sister, Martha, having followed him to America several months later, to return with him to England, "not supposing," as she expressed it, "that he intended to remain in the wilderness." But the visit resulted quite differently. (See Martha Pitkin Wolcott.)

Twenty-four years earlier, in 1634-5, the remnant of that little band which had come from Newtown and Dorchester the preceding year, had settled from Windsor to Wethersfield. These were followed in 1636, by the Rev. Thomas Hooker and Stone, who came from Newtown, Mass., and settled in Hartford, Conn., on both sides of the Little River so far as was practicable, as will be seen by the location of their homesteads on the following map:

The Rev. Thomas Hooker settled on the east corner of what is now Prospect and Arch Streets.

Mr. Stone, his assistant in the church, on the opposite corner of Prospect and Arch; and the Elder in the church, William Goodwin, still west on the corner of Arch and Main Streets. Further west, on the opposite corner of Main and Welles Streets, one of his supporters, Thomas Stanley; and west of Mr. Stanley, Mr. Richard and Thomas Lord, their houses all fronting on the Little River.

Across the Little River, on the south side, the Wyllys, Whitings, Hopkins, Welles, Hosmer, Steeles, Bull, Olmsteds, Smiths, and Hills, settled. Afterwards, on the east of Rev. Thomas Hooker, on the corner of Arch and Front Streets, was the homestead of the Governor, John Haynes, who had probably sold his lot on Main Street to John Pratt. North of Governor Haynes on Front Street, was James Olmsted, and still north, on Front, and just above State, was Timothy Stanley (brother of Thomas), John Marsh, and others, whose lots extended west to Dorr Street, now Market Street, although no street was there, except that *Mr., an honored title of those days, conferred upon few. Eleven persons only, we believe, were thus distinguished, among the early settlers of the Hartford Colony during the first twenty-five years of its settlement.

Meeting-house Square then extended as far north as the old City Hall Market, or Kinsley Street; and, it is believed, as far south as Grove Street.

On the east side of Meeting-house Square was the prison or jail.

On the southeast side was the first meeting-house, supposed to have been built before Hooker arrived. (See "The Two Hundred and Fiftieth Anniversary of the First Church of Hartford. R. Swift, p. 140).

On the north side of the Square, between what is now State and Kinsley, on quite an elevation, was the first burial-ground of those who settled Hartford, many of the bones having been removed in taking down the hill when building on Market and State Streets.

In the second burying ground, adjoining the First Church on Main Street, may be seen a shaft erected to the memory of the early settlers of Hartford, a view of which is here shown.

On Main Street, north of William Goodwin, were the homesteads of John Steele, Richard Olmsted, and John Talcott.

West of Main Street, on Trumbull, and running west to High Street, there being then neither Church nor Ann Streets, was the homestead of Mr. Ozias Goodwin (brother of Elder William Goodwin), the progenitor of the Goodwin family; as William left but one child, a daughter, Elizabeth, who married John Crow, one of the largest land owners of Hartford, east side.

The names above mentioned have been selected as of especial interest, for having furnished, with one exception, that of Mr. Stone, the wives and mothers of the numerous Pitkin families, as will be found in this Genealogy.

Into this goodly company, twenty-four years later, in 1659, came William Pitkin "with an excellent law education," say the records of the day; but from a bound volume now in the possession of one of his descendants, containing one hundred and seventy sermons, each from a Scripture text, in manuscript, in his own classical handwriting, it might be inferred that he was educated for the ministry. At all events these sermons on Man's Redemption, through belief in the atoning blood of Christ, would put to blush some of the pulpit teaching of to-day.

"Law is the faint reflection of man's turbid mind,
Of the bright Order, first, by Heaven designed.
Religion, the deep homage of his finite soul,
In awful reverence of Supreme control."

— Anon.

At this time the Colony had no need of a lawyer, or minister either.

He consequently applied for, and received liberty, by vote of the town, to teach school, at a salary of £8 per annum and a load of wood from each scholar, or "three shillings in lieu of the wood."

It is believed that he taught school in a building owned by Mr. Church, as a building was leased of him at that time for a school, on the north side of Sentinel Hill (now North Main street; then a large open lot with quite an elevation where a sentinel was posted) and on that part of Sentinel Hill fronting the head of Trumbull Street, on which street he may have lived in the family of Ozias Goodwin, whose daughter Hannah he married two years later, in 1661, and who is the maternal ancestor of all of the name of Pitkin in America.

There is no evidence that William Pitkin came to America with any company of settlers, or that he ever intended to settle here. He may have been actuated to visit this country by reason of the reports made by Rev. Mr. Stone and others, who came from Hertfordshire, the home of the Pitkins in England, and, possibly, his own birth-place. At all events, it is certain that he was expected to return, from the words of a loving sister, a mere girl of twenty-two summers, who followed him to this country a year or more later to return with her brother; not once thinking that "he intended to remain in the wilderness," as she expressed it. But ere the sister arrived he had formed stronger ties here, having married the accomplished Miss Goodwin, and settled on the east side of the river.

Neither did the sister return to England. Her education, beauty, and accomplishments,—all subjects of early record,—made her a desirable acquisition for the colonists; and they became generally anxious to detain her, which was accomplished by her marrying Simon Wolcott of Windsor. Thus were two notable families raised up in this their American home.

That the brother and sister had some wealth is evident from their being able to make their visit to America with a view of returning. A still greater evidence is the fact that William Pitkin was the largest land-owner on the east side of the river.

He bequeathed in his will nearly eight hundred (800) acres of land, after having given his two older sons a portion of it. His estate inventoried over £700—after having educated a family of six sons and two daughters.

(In his will, which here follows, by his "cousin Roger," his nephew Roger in London is meant; "nephews and nieces" were called "cousins" in the early time.)

CHAPTER V.

HARTFORD.

"These were their habitations and their genealogy."—I. Chron. iv, 33.

"Thy parent stream, fair Hartford, meets the eye,
Far opening upward to the northern sky,
No watery glades through richer valleys shine,
Nor drinks the sea a lovelier wave than thine."

—Joel Barlow.

As Hartford is the ancestral home of all of our name in this country, it may be well to say something of it here.

"Conceive, dear reader, Connecticut River* in front of our city; and stretching from its banks on either side—but sloping soon to uplands on the west—behold level extensive meadows as now, but here and there wooded and covered with underbrush, while large spaces appear wholly destitute of timber, covered with long grass, or perhaps Indian beds of corn, hemp, and squash. Such was the first aspect of Hartford to the primitive settlers. Truly, it was a goodly one!

Upon its site, and around it, were Indians many. On the south, a tribe tributary to the Mattabesetts; on the north, the Mattanags or Windsor Indians; on the east were the Podunks and Hockanum Indians; and on the west, the Tunxis; and on the site itself, a tribe we will designate 'Suckiage,' from the name of the place."—Scaeva.

Such were the aboriginal inhabitants of the country into which the Hartford settlers came,—who had no more curiosity than was embodied in "Who knows?" and with no thought or purpose of a future more definite than "some other time"; but kind and generous in disposition. No wonder that to them the restless, inquisitive, insatiable, close-reckoning Puritans finally seemed the most intolerable of all conquerors to whom they could surrender. One can almost fancy them shudder in their graves at the humming, buzzing industries of the manufactories, cities, and railroads that to-day cover their "hunting grounds" from which the aggression of the white man has driven them.

ITS EARLIEST SETTLERS.

In 1631 Wahquimacut, a prominent sachem of one of the river tribes, visited Boston and Plymouth, offering beaver skins to such white men as would come and settle on their river, the Connecticut. His probable reason was to gain allies against a greater sachem, one Pekoath, with whom he was at war. His visit, however, failed of its object, although Gov. Winslow of Plymouth, did visit the river during the year 1631-2.

* Long River or River of Pines.

In 1633 Lieut. Holmes came up the river as far as Windsor, and opened a large trade in furs. In 1634-5 about sixty others came from Newton and Dorchester, but were unfortunate in not meeting their vessel of supplies, by reason of the early winter and closing of the river.

This party became disheartened, and scattered; some dying, some returning home as best they could, while others were kept alive by the Indians, and so held out till spring, and commenced a settlement and a church. Their first town-meeting was held in 1635, and their first General Court in 1636.

The growing discontent of Hooker and Hopkins in the Massachusetts Colony with a Winthrop and a Cotton,* undoubtedly brought the former, in 1636, with about a hundred others, across the wilderness to settle Hartford.

ITS PURCHASE.

The first step of the early settlers after their arrival was to purchase land. Accordingly, Rev. Mr. Stone and Mr. William Goodwin were appointed, in behalf of the others, to treat for land with the tribe of Suckiage, through Sequassen, their chief sachem. They were successful. The land was purchased and paid for, to the full satisfaction of all concerned; but it does not appear what was given in consideration of the deed; probably cloth, tools, kettles, etc.

Soon a division of the land took place among the settlers, as indicated by the map.

Hartford originally embraced in its township what is now the four towns of West Hartford, Hartford, East Hartford, Manchester.

East Hartford was incorporated in 1783; Manchester was incorporated and set off from East Hartford in 1823; West Hartford was incorporated and set off from Hartford in 1854.

ITS NAME.

“What’s in a name?” Its Indian name was Suckiage.†

In its mere babyhood the early settlers called it, from its transitory mother in Massachusetts, “Newtown.” But they soon tired of the name of the “Bay State Widow”; and on Feb. 21, 1636, Mr. Ludlow, Mr. Steele, Mr. Westwood, and others, “laid their legislative hands upon it” and baptized it “Hartford.” (Windsor was also changed from Dorchester, and Wethersfield from Watertown.) This was the name of the town in England which Mr. Stone was from, and seems to have been adopted in commemoration of this fact. Why Chelmsford, the birthplace of Mr. Hooker, was not selected, is nowhere apparent; probably Mr. Stone or his friends were more active in the baptism. At all events, a good and honorable name was chosen.

† Black or rich earth.

ITS NAME IN ENGLAND.

Hertford in England was the leading town of Hertfordshire as is our town now. It lies on the river Lea, relatively as Hartford here lies on the Connecticut, is twenty-one miles north of London, and is a town of very considerable antiquity. We find the name, in its original Saxon dress, and caused it to be engraved, that all may see it as it looked when born. Here it is:

Heortford!

In the dress of to-day the first two syllables form Heort, a word which signifies a stag five years old. The third syllable is ford, and signifies a place in a river, or other water, where it may be crossed by man or beast, on foot or by wading. Etymologically, then, Hertford means, clearly, the ford of harts.

The armorial bearings of Hertford in Hertfordshire in England, which formerly abounded in deer, was a hart couchant, and the name was formerly spelled with an a instead of an e in the first syllable.

Hartford must have a coat of arms, and is entitled to one. Connecticut has its coat of arms, — the grape-vines, bearing fruit, and is one of the United States of America whose conspicuous emblem is the eagle. We have taken, then, in strict conformity with heraldic rules, for our fair town the following coat of arms:

Ar., an American Hart proper, fording a stream, trippant, in fess; in a Landskip in middle base, a Grape-vine bearing fruit, naissant from a strip of earth, — all proper. Crest, an American Eagle proper, displayed. Motto, Post nubila Phœbus.

EXPLANATION.

The Escutcheon or a Shield of a Coat of Arms, in form, is at the pleasure or fancy of the bearer. In this design it is nearly heart-shaped.

Its field or surface is white Ar., a contraction of argent, silver. Proper denotes natural color.

Trippant expresses a hart or hind with right foot fore, lifted or stepping. In fess denotes any charge placed horizontally or diagonally across the middle of the field, as the hart in the plate.

Landskip denotes a base of the escutcheon when painted, with field, tree, or vines therein.

Naissant, arising or coming forth. Crest, denotes the uppermost, or the top of the Coat of Arms. Displayed applies to birds of prey with wings extended. Scroll, is the outside decorated. Post nubila Phœbus means After the clouds the sun. With the eagle of our country, we blazon "Hartford, Connecticut."—(Hartford in Ye Olden Time.)

CHAPTER VI.

CIVIL ORGANIZATION.

"That search may be made in the book of the records of thy fathers."—Ezra iv, 15.

"It is to be regretted that our Hartford town records, previous to 1639, are but few in number; not enough to occupy a page of this work.

"How many settlers preceded Hooker? Enough to form a town. Their first town-meeting was held in 1635. They also elected members for a General Court. The first ever held in this State, was April 6, 1636. Its first Hartford members were John Steele and William Westwood.

"Its origin as a town was purely democratic as regards its inhabitants. But who constituted its inhabitants? The question was an important one. No persons save those who were admitted as such by a vote of the town, in public meeting. The settlers were careful and circumspect with regard to this matter. No idle, vicious, or abandoned person stood the least chance of gaining a settlement with them, or being permitted even to tarry.

"Constituted as described, the first inhabitants of Hartford made their own Assemblage the medium of their legislation.

"They established the Town-meeting, that primitive nursery of republicanism, whose fruit now feeds and thrills the free soul of every man, woman, and child among us.

"They made it the duty of every male inhabitant to attend their town-meeting and remain until its close, under penalty of a fine; so that every man should be interested in and acquainted with its affairs."—Scaeva.

In the early history of Connecticut the action of Church and State was identical. All the affairs of the town were voted on in Church-meeting; and so continued till 1726, when the General Court allowed the formation of other sects or churches, when the Congregational Church took the name of the "Prime Ancient Society." Not till then was the town-meeting separate from the church-meeting.

"The government established by our fathers in the young Colony of Connecticut was in many respects a stern and exacting one; and probably to nothing does our government owe so much for its permanence and present stability as to the fact that it was founded upon the Puritan idea of 'absolute righteousness.' Although the long reviled 'Blue Laws of Connecticut' have been proven a fabrication, there was enough in the actual 'Code of 1650' to make a sinful nature shrink from it. There were fourteen capital laws, formed upon the "Mosaic Code," and all but one have a reference to Scripture authority attached to it." (Goodwin's "East Hartford.")

The price of labor, even, was regulated by law.

Excess in apparel was forbidden, or so heavily taxed as to amount to a prohibition. Any one wearing gold or silver lace, or gold or silver buttons, silk ribbon or silk scarfs, or any "bone lace" above three shillings per yard, were to be assessed at one hundred and fifty pounds estate, "that they were to pay, as such persons do pay, to whom such apparel is allowed as suitable to their rank." The last clause would indicate that the rich might have some luxuries if they were willing to be taxed for them. Certain it is that in 1792 the listers of East Hartford taxed twelve chaises, six of which were in Pitkin families. The first one brought into town was owned by Elisha Pitkin, Esq.

Slaves, whether considered a luxury or not, were common in the wealthy families; and slavery was not abolished by statute in our State till 1848, though practically extinct long before that date.

As early as 1771, the importation of slaves into Connecticut was forbidden; and in 1784 an act was passed declaring that all children of slaves born after that date, should become free at the age of twenty-five years.

We find the names of the following slaves entered on the records as belonging to one Pitkin family:

Flora, born 1752.

Lill,

Silvia,

Nando,

Leah, born 1783.

Gin,

Dinah,

Tama.

A story is told of a youngster in one of the early Pitkin families who, when asked how many brothers there were, promptly replied: "There's Dan, an' Zi, an' Pomp, an' I." (Pomp, or "Pomp Equality," as he was called, was quite a character. He owned and commanded a vessel quite successfully after gaining his freedom, while the youngster himself afterward commanded the first steamboat that came up the Connecticut River.)

One of the above-mentioned slaves, Leah, went to Albany, N. Y., with her master's descendants, and afterward married; but instead of taking her husband's name, took that of her former master, and within the writer's memory some of her colored descendants bearing the name of Pitkin, were living in Albany, N. Y.

CHAPTER VII.

ITS SCHOOLS.

“To receive the instruction of wisdom, to perceive the words of understanding.”—Prov. i, 2, 3.

The School still continued to exist with the settlers, for they had almost all “fed on the pabulum of Education.”

The first school-master mentioned is William Andrews, who lived on the corner of Elm and Bliss Streets, now the Park, corner of Elm and Trinity Streets. The next was Samuel Fitch.

In 1642, thirty pounds a year was settled on the town school.

In 1650, it was ordered that each town of fifty householders should maintain a schoolmaster; and every town of one hundred householders should set up a grammar school, to fit scholars for the University.

“The confusion of College and University appears as early as 1701, in proposals for erecting a University, in the renowned Colony of Connecticut.” The writer also speaks of a Synod being gathered, for settling a University. (Theodore D. Woolsey on “Academical Degrees,” Century Magazine.)

In 1659, by vote of the town, Mr. William Pitkin, presumably its third school master, was to receive eight pounds per annum, also one load of wood from each scholar, or “three shillings in lieu of the wood.”

Probably the first legacy for educational purposes in Connecticut, was by William Gibbons of Hartford, who died in 1655, and by his will “devised about thirty (30) acres of land in ‘Pen-wise,’ in the town of Wethersfield, toward the maintenance of a Latin School in Hartford.” (Col. Rec., Vol. IV, p. 31.)

Again in 1664, Gov. Hopkins gave a legacy of four hundred pounds to the Grammar School at Hartford, which exists to-day in connection with the Hartford High School, its lineal descendant. Through the wise management of town committee and trustee, this fund had increased, in 1853, to twenty thousand dollars. Why the name of “Hopkins Grammar School” was not given to it, instead of Hopkins to the street on which the school is now located, we do not know.

In October, 1702, six hundred acres of land were granted to the Hartford Grammar School.

“In October, 1714, William Pitkin, William Whiting, Esquires, of Hartford, and Nathaniel Burnham of Wethersfield, were appointed a committee to lay out the aforesaid land according to the aforesaid grant.” (Col. Rec., Vol. V, p. 462.)

Again, in 1795, by the wise heads of Connecticut, was established the School Fund, derived from the sale of Connecticut’s “Western Reserve” or “New Connecticut.” See Chapter IX.

Again, in 1837, by an Act of Congress, the surplus money in the United States Treasury accruing from the discontinuance of the United States Bank was divided between all the States, subject to a return by vote of Congress; and Connecticut's share has been held by the State as a Trust Fund, the interest to go toward the support of its schools.

This income, together with that from the School Fund, and the appropriation of the State, gives to all the children in our State, between the ages of four and sixteen, the sum of three to four dollars, annually, towards their schooling.

Wise legislators! "They builded better than they knew."

SCHOOLS, EAST SIDE.

In 1710, Rev. Samuel Woodbridge, Samuel Welles, and William Pitkin, 2d, were appointed to hire a school teacher, and a school-house was to be built; but nothing appears to have been done till ten years later — probably, on account of good schools on the west side. In 1718, two schools were ordered; one in Main street, east side, and one below the Hockanum river, and one teacher to be hired for the schools, the time to be divided between the two. The schools do not appear to have been built or opened till 1720; as by the records Capt. Roger Pitkin is appointed in 1720 the first school committee on the east side, north of the Hockanum River, and Lieut. Olcott on the south side.

In 1720-1, the sum of nine pounds, twelve shillings, and four pence, was voted to the school.

In 1723, all children were taxed to support the school, whether they attended or not.

In 1727, the children were relieved of one-half the expense of the school, and in 1729 the society assumed all the expenses.

In 1745, the Third Society, east side, voted, "that those persons living on the Five Mile lands — Orford* Society — (afterwards Manchester) may have their ratable part of the school money improved among themselves." This opened another school on the east side.

In 1795, the General Assembly provided that the future school societies consist of Society Committee, Committee of School Officers, and Visiting Committee.

Of the several committees of the Orford Society, we append the following:

Rev. Solomon King,
Rev. Allen Olcott,
Dr. George Griswold,
Moses Gleason,
Richard Pitkin,

Timothy Cheney,
Deodat Woodbridge,
Joseph Pitkin,
Alex. McLean.

In 1795, a permanent School Fund had been provided, and further increased in 1837; which virtually assured the free schooling of every child in our State.

What citizen of Connecticut should not be proud, that in a State with a population of nearly four hundred thousand (400,000) souls in 1850, only three hundred of its native population could not read or write. This included all incapacitated by idiocy, or by disease of whatever kind.

CHAPTER VIII.

ITS CHURCH ORGANIZATION.

"He shall build an house for my name." — I. Chron. xii, 10.

A few words here of the church organization of Hartford. It was purely Congregational, and we may add, also purely republican, "Non-conformists," all to the liturgy, ceremonies, and discipline of the Church of England; though believing in its fruits, yet feeling that the simplicity of the Gospel was "marred by association with the display of surplices, caps, copes, and cassocks."

The people claimed the right, independently of all external or foreign power, to choose and establish their own minister, to enact their own ecclesiastical laws, and exercise their own discipline. In short, it was the planting here of a "Church without a bishop," and founding a "State without a king." And so, with a pastor, teacher, ruling elder, and deacons for officers, in a meeting-house which those who preceded Hooker and his party had already built, they started the first systematized Church of God in this, then wilderness, town.

Their views on Ordination, Baptism, the Atonement, and Repentance, their mode of covenanting and confession of faith, will receive no comment here.

It is certain that, though they kept not the "unity of apparel," they kept the "unity of faith," and as they stood before their Maker, in simple attire, with white neck-cloth and broad white pendant bands, the good God, we doubt not, listened to their cry as freely and mercifully as if they had been habited in all the ecclesiastical decencies of the land from whence they fled. At all events, He blessed them in their beginning.

How many in the early period of the church were adopted into its membership, we know not.

How many excommunicated from its embrace? But one, that we can learn — Matthew Allen — and this distinguished settler "without cause," he says, "and unjustly." For in 1644, he petitioned to the General Court, affirming that he had been wronged, and he was ordered to bring into court the particulars of his accusation, but he never did so. (Hartford in Ye Olden Time.) "Soon after, in 1650, a controversy commenced in the First Church in Hartford, which for its circumstances, its duration, and obstinacy was the most remarkable of any in its day. Nor was it confined to Connecticut. It hung like a cloud over the hearts of all New England. It began in a controversy between Rev. Mr. Stone and Elder William Goodwin, in a question of personal preference for a pulpit candidate, and their prerogative, as the two chief officers of the church, the claims of the brotherhood * * * * * and the rights of the minister."

This disruption in the church was such as to cause to withdraw from it in 1659, the following persons, who moved to, and settled Hadley, Mass.: Gov. Webster, Elder Wm. Goodwin, John Crow, Richard Goodman, Thomas Stanley, Samuel Porter, John Marsh, Nathaniel Stanley, and others.

Mr. Goodwin was a very able and reverend man, but had previously been reproved in open court, for his unreverend speech.

Mr. Stone, too, was an exceedingly reverend and able man, but he obviously took very high views of the prerogatives of his office and ministerial authority. His own graphic expression, "a speaking aristocracy in the face of a silent democracy," sets forth at once the views he took of church government, and the source of all its woes.

"On the whole, respecting the controversy itself, the impartial verdict of history must be that the general weight of right and justice was with the defeated and emigrating minority — the Goodwin party."*

But the storm of contention and discord in the churches still continued to rage on every side, greatly augmented, in 1664, by the question of Baptism. [See a petition by William Pitkin and six others to the General Court, to compel the church to administer the right of baptism to their children. — Stiles' "Windsor," p. 167.]

The original paper, written in the "skillful hand of Mr. William Pitkin," is now in the State Library at Hartford.

The court, it is regretted, granted the request and ordered the churches so to practice. This measure is what is known as the "Half-way Covenant"; and its baneful influence was felt in the church for many years, if not to the present day.

It is a matter of record, that one of his great-grandsons, the Rev. Timothy Pitkin of Farmington, after a long controversy in his church over the matter, demanded his dismissal, in 1731, unless the church voted to abandon the practice of the "Half-Way Covenant." It was abandoned in that church.

In 1669, the Second Church of Hartford was organized by the withdrawal of the Rev. John Whiting, and thirty-one members of the First Church of Hartford.

In 1694, the East Side people first asked for a minister; and in 1695, the General Court granted their request, and the Third Church of Hartford was organized.

In 1699, William Pitkin, Deacon Joseph Olmsted, and Lieutenant Hills were appointed a committee to order a new meeting-house. The building was located in the forks of the road on the main street, East Side, north of the bridge across the Hockanum River.

* History of the First Church of Hartford, page 175.

In 1702, it was increased by members from the First Church of Hartford, and Rev. John Reed was its temporary minister.

In 1705, the Rev. Samuel Woodbridge was ordained its pastor, and in 1746-7 Eliphalet Williams was called, and preached till 1803.

This society was called the "Third Church of Hartford" for nearly ninety years, until 1783, when East Hartford was incorporated a separate town.

Previous to 1748, those living on the Five Mile Lands (Orford Society), had paid the minister's rate to the Third Ecclesiastical Society. Later, they asked to be incorporated a separate society. In 1772, the General Court granted their request, and the Ecclesiastical Society of Orford was established. In 1773, this society voted to build a meeting-house, and Timothy Cheney, Richard Pitkin, Robert McKee, and later, Ward Woodbridge, were appointed a committee for building it. Thus was added another church to the East Side.

The Third Church of Hartford above mentioned, has had three buildings; the first, a small, low one, which stood forty-five years; the second, built in 1740, was taken down in 1835, having been occupied ninety-five years.

The third building, now standing, was dedicated January 20, 1836.

Much of interest to the church and its members, is lost, valuable records having been destroyed by fire in 1858.*

It may be of interest to state here, that into this Third Church of Hartford, some two hundred Pitkin children have been baptized, and about one hundred and fifty persons of the name received into its membership; the loss of the early records prevented giving the exact number. Among the number of deacons recorded, previous to 1860, one-fifth were of the name of Pitkin. In the erection of the present building of this society in 1836, exclusive of one thousand dollars, given by the town, for the use of the basement, one seventh of the whole amount was contributed by the Pitkin family.

The Fourth Church of Christ in Hartford, was organized with twenty-nine members and set off from the First Church of Christ in Hartford, February 24, 1713, and was located in the west division of Hartford, and was called the Fourth Church of Hartford until West Hartford was incorporated a separate town in 1834.

In connection with the First Church of Christ in Hartford, and the churches set off from it, we find the several pastors closely connected with the Pitkin family.

Mary Woodbridge, daughter of Rev. Timothy Woodbridge of the First Church of Hartford, married Governor William Pitkin.

Her cousin, Rev. Samuel Woodbridge, was the first pastor of the Third Church of Hartford, East Side.

Rev. Benjamin Colton, first pastor of the Fourth Church of Christ, Hartford, West Side, married Elizabeth Pitkin, daughter of William Pitkin, 2d. The second pastor of this church, Rev. Nathan Perkins, D. D., married Catherine Pitkin, daughter of the Rev. Timothy Pitkin of Farmington, Conn. The third pastor of this church, Rev. Nathanael Hooker, Jr., a descendant of Rev. Thomas Hooker, married Ruth Skinner, a grand-daughter of Elizabeth Pitkin, who married Rev. Benjamin Colton.

The practice of "Dignifying the Meeting House," in ye olden time, prevailed till 1824. The following quaintly humorous lines, written by Mr. Elisha Benton, about a hundred years ago, may be of interest. (From papers of Major Samuel Pitkin.)

"ADVICE TO THE NEXT SEATERS."

"That each worthy member may rightly be placed,
 The Seaters should have a fine fancy and taste,
 Your fond proposition should also be strong,
 Or else you'll be subject to act very wrong;
 You ought to be furnished with very great knowledge,
 And if you have not taken degrees at the College
 You ought to be all of you masters of arts,
 For you'll find work enough to employ all your parts.
 The great art of pleasing you ought well to study,
 But I don't mean by this, you should please everybody;
 If you can please yourself and your private relations
 'Twill answer exactly to our expectations.
 As seaters, 'tis certain you ought to be trimmers,
 Even such as have made some advance in your primers,—
 As mean folks should never be mixed with their betters;
 You ought to distinguish and know the great letters,
 Especially all the great capital P's,
 And all the great round O's, and all the great G's,
 The great H's, also, and great W's,
 Are all well entitled to elegant pews;
 And the great crooked S's must be respected,
 And the F's will fight you, if they are neglected;
 And the great broad R's will rave and like Bedlam will roar,
 If you leave them behind and not keep them before;
 Your full-blooded Heroes with Marshal Commission
 Expect mighty reverence in every condition,—
 They have keen sense of Honor, extremely high mettled,
 If they think they are slighted you'll see how they're nettled;
 They must be promoted at every new seating,
 Though seldom you see them on Sunday at Meeting.
 A person well-dressed must attract your regard,
 For them you may study no matter how hard;
 However immoral, profane, or ill-manner'd,
 There can be no doubt that they ought to be honor'd,—
 Fine dress and rich clothing and fine handsome faces,
 Should always be set in conspicuous places;
 And men of fine learning whose wives wear Silk Gowns,
 Should never be placed with Blockheads and Clowns.
 What a fine show they make; when these troops all appear

In the house when they're placed in the front of the rear,
While some in the center are ordered to rally
And form two Grand Columns to line the broad alley;
Those worthies first in such eminent station
Would beautify greatly our Great Congregation,
But as for the rest, all the Vulgar, oh fy,
To please 'twill never be worth while to try,
There's no place of honor to which you can fetch them,
You may thrust them in anywhere, just when you catch 'em.
But if you are bewildered in all your endeavors,
Dissolve and go home and plow with your heifers,—
Those heifers which carry one end of the yoke
Will soon help get the pig out of the poke;
And as they're willing and apt to assist,
They'll scatter the fog and dispel all the mist;
By hearing their counsel no doubt they'll work wonders,
They'll rectify all your mistakes and your blunders,
For be your embarrassment ever so great,
They make all light, and crooked things straight;
They'll introduce order, where you make confusion,
And bring things to a happy and speedy conclusion;—
Consult all the ladies you wish for to please,
And the business may then be accomplished with ease.”

To those not familiar with the names of the families of that day, the following names are supposed to have been meant by the initials: P, Pitkin; O, Olmsted; G, Goodwin; H, Hills; W, Williams; S, Stanley; F, Forbes; R, Roberts. Some of the initials may have been intended for more than one family name: S. may have included Stanley, Spencer, and Smith, and W., Wadsworth, Welles, Woodbridge, and Williams.

CHAPTER IX.

CONNECTICUT AS A STATE.

"And it shall come to pass when ye be come to the land which the Lord will give you."
—Exodus xii, 25.

"Hither the neighboring Indian kings resort, and join with them in articles of peace, and of their lands make firm conveyance." — (ROGER WOLCOTT, from Scaera, p. 15.)

Stoughton says that "God sifted a whole nation, that He might send choice grain over into this wilderness. The choicest of the seed was planted in Connecticut, and took deep root. Its fruits are ripening in every State on this continent."

In the territorial policy of the Hartford settlers, except by its purchase of the Indians, they had no rights, either as a company, a colony, or a State, until their Charter from Charles II. in 1662, making twenty-six years of "squatter sovereignty."

Its Charter in 1662 granted to the Governor and company of Connecticut (Quonehtacutt*) all that part of New England south of the Massachusetts line and west of the Norrogansett (Narragansett) River and Bay to the South Sea (Pacific Ocean), with the islands thereunto adjoining, excepting such land as was already occupied by previous settlers."

This grant, if not one of the richest ever given to a State in square miles alone, probably was in territory, coal and oil and mineral wealth combined; for it included the coal and oil region of what is now Pennsylvania, and some of the rich gold-bearing territory of California, as since developed. Had they but known and occupied it!

A grant to William Penn, nineteen years later, in 1681, covered a part of the territory included in the Connecticut charter, Wyoming Valley. In 1753, ninety-one years after this grant, the citizens of Connecticut determined to occupy their land west of New York Colony, and in 1754 purchased of the Sachems of the "Six Nations" a large tract at Wyoming, and settled the town of West Moreland (Moreland West), which sent Representatives to the Connecticut Assembly.

This settlement excited the jealousy of the Pennsylvania settlers, who attempted to drive the Connecticut settlers from the lands by force of arms. This failing, the Sachems of the "Six Nations" were invited to Albany, N. Y., to meet commissioners from the two States, in 1754. These commissioners consisted of the following from Pennsylvania: John and Richard Penn, Isaac Norris, and Benjamin Franklin. From Connecticut: Deputy-Governor William Pitkin, Roger Wolcott, and Elisha Williams. The difficulty was not adjusted till 1782, when a commission at Trenton, N. J., decided against Connecticut, in which she acquiesced; but maintained her claim to all the land west of Pennsylvania to the Mississippi River. In 1786, however, she ceded to the United States Government all her lands west of Pennsylvania, excepting a tract one hundred and twenty miles in length by some seventy in width, in the State of Ohio, which is still called New Connecticut or Connecticut's Western Reserve. A part of this reserved land, comprising a half million acres, was granted to New London, Fairfield, and Norwalk to compensate them for property destroyed during the Revolution. The remainder was sold in September, 1795, and the money arising therefrom, one million two hundred thousand dollars, on annual interest from Sept. 2, 1797, constituted the School Fund of Connecticut. Notwithstanding the State relinquished two years' interest, or one hundred and forty-four thousand ($144,000) dollars to the purchasers in consequence of a delay in the Congress of the United States to authorize the President to issue a patent of said reserved lands to the State of Connecticut for the benefit of the purchasers, and notwithstanding also the loss of over half a million dollars interest on some of the loans, in 1884 this fund had increased to over two million dollars. In a little more than twenty years to 1819, Connecticut had loaned in other States one million dollars of this money. In New York, six hundred thousand ($600,000); in Massachusetts, three hundred and thirty thousand ($330,000); in Vermont and Ohio, seventy thousand ($70,000). (Senate Report, 1819.) Thus early did Connecticut become a financial center for loaning money, a precedent which her Hartford institutions have always maintained.

* Indian name. Benj. Trumbull.

In establishing the dividing line between the Province of Massachusetts Bay and the Colony of Connecticut, 105,793 acres of ungranted land fell to Connecticut. In 1715, William Pitkin, Matthew Allyn, Joseph Talcott, Roger Wolcott, Esquires, and Capt. Aaron Cook, were appointed a committee to sell said lands to the highest bidder. Of the £683 received for said lands, £500 of said money were paid to the trustees of the Collegiate School then at Saybrook, Connecticut,* for the building of a college house which was built at New Haven, Connecticut, in 1717. Its largest personal benefactor was Hon. Elihu Yale, who also gave £500 toward its erection, and for whom it was named "Yale College." The balance of said money, £183, was put into the treasury of the colony.

The birth of Connecticut dates from the formation of the Constitution in 1638-9. This little commonwealth adopted at Hartford the first written American Constitution, January, 1639. No king, no congress, no legislature presided at its conception, or at its birth. It was not only the earliest, but the longest in duration, of any American document of its kind. Even the Charter of King Charles II., in 1662, did not materially change it, but was rather a confirmation of it, and not till 1818 was it superceded, and then by our present State Constitution, from which it does not essentially differ.

* Colonial Records, Vol. v, p. 529.

Connecticut was as absolutely a State, by its own constitution in 1639, as it was in 1776.

At the first meeting of the colonies to form a plan of union in 1754, William Pitkin, 3d, Lieutenant-Governor of the Connecticut Colony, and five others were chosen a committee (of which Benjamin Franklin was chairman) to prepare a constitution. Their plan was not then adopted, for the reason that the colonies were jealous of their independence, and inclined as much as possible to maintain their separate existence. But in 1777 the war had taught the colonies a lesson, that their strength was in union, and the plan proposed in 1754 was the germ of the Articles of Confederation redrawn by Franklin in 1775, and adopted in 1777, under which the colonies lived till the adoption of the Federal Constitution. It will be seen that a Pitkin took a leading part in the first movement made towards the formation of this Government and Nation.

Again, in 1777, William Pitkin, 4th, and six others were appointed to consider the Articles of Confederation, drawn up and prepared by Franklin and others of the committee of which William Pitkin, 3d, was a member, and presented by Congress "for a plan of union, to be adopted and come into, by the United States of America." These Articles of Confederation were in force till 1788.

The Town of Hartford by vote, in 1783, instructed its representatives to strenuously oppose the encroachment of the American Congress upon the sovereignty of the separate States and every assumption of power not vested in Congress by the Articles of Confederation. In the convention which ratified the Constitution of the United States, holden at Hartford, January, 1788, Hon. Matthew Griswold presiding, the delegates from East Hartford were William Pitkin, 4th, and Elisha Pitkin.

Also in the convention which formed the State Constitution in 1818, his Excellency Oliver Wolcott presiding, the delegates from East Hartford were Richard Pitkin, 2d, son of Richard, and Samuel Pitkin, son of "Esquire" Elisha.

Connecticut in its early history has stood "first and foremost" in all its policies. It is unsurpassed as the leading State of the Union.

Firstly, in its "no Charter Sovereignty" of twenty-six years, and when its charter was granted another colony was merged into it. Also the magnitude of its charter, extending as it did to the Pacific Ocean, with representatives to her legislature from its "Western Reserve," or "New Connecticut," in what is now the State of Ohio. Here Connecticut emigration helped to found the Western Reserve College.

Secondly, in forming the first written Constitution in the history of Nations, it may be said to have embodied the main points of all our subsequent State Constitutions and of Federal Constitutions. Connecticut may thus claim to have furnished the model for our whole republic; no royal veto was ever attempted to be exercised over the acts passed by the legislature of this State or colony, as was over every other colony and State in America; or the least interference with the chartered rights of this State until 1687, when it resisted the demand to surrender her charter when the charter of every other State was annulled and surrendered. Every one has read of the sudden disappearance, and safe seclusion in the old oak, of the Connecticut charter.

(Picture of the oak in which the charter was hid.)

When the workmen were clearing and felling the trees for the homestead of George Wyllys, — afterward Governor, — a deputation of Indians appeared and protested against cutting down a venerable oak which stood upon the hill. They pleaded in behalf of this memorial tree, that it had been the guide of their ancestors, for centuries, — probably as a landmark, and as to the time of planting their corn. “When the leaves were the size of a mouse’s ear,” then “it was time to put seed in the ground.” Their entreaties prevailed, and the tree continued to stand for two hundred and twenty (220) years after, till 1856, when it fell.

During this time it had served to secrete the Charter given by King Charles II., and which King James II., through Sir Edmund Andros, tried to wrest from the young colony.

Connecticut was also unsurpassed in its church, school, municipal, and militia organization; which John Adams early pronounced the “four pillars of New England’s prosperity, and the main elements of the public welfare and safety.”

Its Hartford High School is the oldest continuous educational institution in the United States, except, possibly, Harvard College, and is contemporary with that, both having been founded in 1638. A Dutch school was founded in New York in 1633, but was closed for many years, and afterwards opened as an English school in 1783.

“Connecticut was the first to raise the standard of the rebellion, which became the standard of a great and glorious revolution. The position of our little State, and the gallant way she bore herself in the Revolutionary War, are matters of history.

“Connecticut, the smallest in point of population of the original thirteen States of the Confederation, stood second on the list of those who sent troops into the field. She furnished more soldiers than Virginia, though the population of Virginia was three times her own, more troops than Pennsylvania, which contained twice as many people, and furnished nearly double the troops sent by New York, more than double the number sent by Maryland, four times the number sent by North Carolina, and four times the number sent by South Carolina, although each one of those States were numerically larger than Connecticut; and more than any other State in the confederacy with one exception.”*

“The State of Connecticut also fitted out in the capacious harbor of New London, the very first naval squadron of the United States that ever sailed under the flag of our common country. That little squadron consisted of the “Alfred,” the “Columbus,” the “Cabot,” and the “Andrea Doria,” and sailed under Admiral

CHARTER OAK.

Ezekiel Hopkins, its Commander-in-Chief, in 1776, to the India seas, and there captured seventy-three British subjects together with forty cannon, fifteen brass mortars, a British schooner, a Bermuda sloop, a British bomb brig laden with arms, and sailed triumphantly back into the harbor of Connecticut from which it started, with the fruits of our first Revolutionary struggle on the great seas."*

"Although in response to a call in 1740 from the 'Mother Country' for aid in the defense of the Spanish West Indies, the Connecticut colony ordered the building of a sloop of eighty to one hundred tons, which was finished in 1741; and in October of that year the 'Defence,' so named, was ordered to Cuba.

"Again in 1742, she was cruising the coast from Massachusetts to Virginia. In 1743, she was refitted and put in order for the war with France, with a crew of one hundred men. She mounted ten guns, four and six pounders.

"In 1745, she was ordered to Cape Breton to join the British fleet in reducing the fort at Louisburg. Capt. James Prentice commanded the 'Defence' under Commodore Warren of the British fleet, Major-General Roger Wolcott commanding the five hundred Connecticut troops on land.

"In 1757, another vessel, a brigantine, was built and partly equipped from the 'Defence,' which was no longer seaworthy. This vessel was one hundred and forty tons burthen, and had one hundred men, and was called the 'Tartar.'"†

"De Tocqueville, the French historian, a great friend of America, was once invited by some of our countrymen in Paris to a Fourth of July dinner. Called upon for a speech towards the close, he promptly responded, and narrated, how, in the course of a tour through the United States, he at length reached Washington. Congress was in session, so, of course he hastened to the capitol, and found himself presently eagerly listening to the various speakers in the Senate chamber and House. One after another rose and harangued the audience, riveting his attention in several instances by their irresistible eloquence, fertility of resource, forcible argument, or sterling common sense. 'Who is that last speaker?' he would exclaim to one who sat beside him. 'Oh! that is a member from Kentucky, but he belonged originally in Connecticut.' Again, 'Who is the able man speaking now?' 'That is the member from Missouri, but he was originally from Connecticut.' 'And that other one, to whom all listened so breathlessly?' 'He is the member from Illinois, but Connecticut was also his native State.' And so on till the vivacious Frenchman became impatient to consult his map, saying to himself 'Dis Konnecticoot must be a very fine State.' He went home and searched the map and found, 'it was only von (one) leetle yellow spot.' He went on to relate how afterwards he went to see for himself that same spot, and when he inspected its schools and colleges, saw its busy trade, successful industries, and the variety of its manufactures, he was led to exclaim, 'Dat leetle State you call Konnecticoot is von great miracle to me!!!!'"

† Sherman W. Adams. Paper read before the Connecticut Historical Society.

For a more complete history of Connecticut in the early times, I here give extracts from Johnson's "Genesis of a State":

GENESIS OF A STATE.

"A state which was born, not made, which grew by natural accretion of townships, which formed its own government, made its own laws, engaged its own alliances, fought its own wars, and built up its own body without the will of King, Kaiser, or Congress, and which, even at the last, only made use of the royal authority to complete the symmetry of the boundaries it had fairly won for itself.

"The accepted story of the transmission of the title to the jurisdiction of Connecticut is very simple.

"The soil was a part of James I.'s grant to the Council of Plymouth, a part of the smaller grant to the Earl of Warwick, in 1630, by the Council of Plymouth; a part of the still smaller grant to Viscount Say and Sele, Lord Brooke, and others, in 1631, by Warwick; and the territory, as it now stands, was confirmed to the colony of Connecticut by Charles II.'s charter of 1662, with the consent of the survivors of the last-named grantees. Minor difficulties, such as Fenwick's troublesome claim under the Say grant, were bought off by the colony; the Indian possessory title was extinguished by purchase and conquest, and the colony's chain of title to its own territory seemed to be without a weak link. In that case there would have been nothing out of the ordinary in the Connecticut colony, and the formation of its territorial body would have followed the general rule. But there was a weak link, or rather, a non-existent link,—the grant to Warwick; he who looks for it will look in vain. Trumbull and Dwight assume that the Say and Sele grant was really from the Council of Plymouth, of which Warwick was the president; but the Say and Sele grant is, by its terms, from Warwick, personally, and the Council of Plymouth is not even named in it. Hollister takes a much more tenable ground; he admits that no trace can be found of a grant to Warwick, but assumes that such a grant must have been made, since Warwick would not otherwise have returned to make the Say and Sele grant. Peters scouts the notion of a grant to Warwick, and taunts the colonial government with its inability to show any original title. Bancroft, and other general authorities, state the grant to Warwick, without noting any doubt as to its validity, and it is generally accepted without question as the basis of Connecticut's territorial claims, subsequently confirmed by the charter.

"On the other hand, not only is it evident that the original settlement of Connecticut was legally a sheer intrusion, in absolute disregard of the paper title on which it afterwards professed to rely, but the Plymouth Council itself did not recognize the Warwick grant, or the claims of the Say and Sele associates under it. On the contrary, when it divided the remaining property in the soil among its members, in 1635, before surrendering the jurisdiction to the king, it granted the territory between the Narraganset and Connecticut rivers to the royalist Marquis of Hamilton, and recorded the grant. This was the only Connecticut grant up to the charter, which came from a source having an ostensible power to grant, and it became obsolete by non-user, since the royalist patentee was unable to make any attempt to colonize under it until colonization was completed without his assistance. On the other side of Long Island Sound lay the fine territory of Long Island. This was covered by a royal grant to the Earl of Stirling, in 1635; but the grantee made no attempt to assert any rights of jurisdiction, and his grantees had at first as open opportunity as the settlers on the mainland to erect independent town republics.

"The nearest approach to the truth seems to be that an informal, and consequently invalid, grant of some kind was made to Warwick, and that the original colonists, in their subsequent search for a paper title, took this as the best one available to them, though they never respected it in practice. They were in no position to feel any pride in that which makes their colonization noteworthy in the absence of an original patent. They would have asserted the Hamilton patent with equal warmth if it had offered superior advantages; they chose the Warwick title because Say, in 1662, while he was a republican, was yet a man of influence with the king because he was a friend to the New Englanders, and disposed to assist any New England colony, and because he, the only surviving patentee, was too rich to care for quit rents, and too old to be a dangerous ally. The truth is, that the colonization and organization of Connecticut took place without the remotest connection with any paper title whatever, and that the Warwick title was purely an afterthought to bolster up by the forms of English law the really better title of the colonists, acquired by their own purchases, conquests, and colonization. For the purposes of this article the Warwick and Say titles may be dismissed as practically both non-existent. In 1634, then, the territory now occupied by Connecticut, was a veritable 'No Man's Land.' It had been granted, indeed, to the Plymouth Council, but the grant stood much on a par with a presentation of a bear-skin, whose natural owner was still at large in the forest.

* * * * *

"In 1635 the Say and Sele associates built a fort at the mouth of the Connecticut River. In 1639 Colonel George Fenwick, the only one of the associates who showed any disposition to urge the claim, brought colonists to Saybrook, or Sea-brook, as the fort was often called, and it kept up an independent existence for some years. Fenwick was treated by the Connecticut colonists with a deference due a possibly formidable rival. In 1644 various reasons called him to England, and he sold Saybrook to the Connecticut colony. The equivalent was to be certain tolls upon vessels passing the fort, and they netted Fenwick about £1,600. In return he transferred the fort, and promised, if it came into his power, to transfer all the land from Saybrook to the Narraganset River. This agreement was never executed, but it quieted the only one of the Say and Sele associates who had shown any disposition to interfere with the pushing and ambitious Connecticut colony. Saybrook had now become a Connecticut town.

"In 1637, the wealthiest body of immigrants that had yet come from England arrived at Boston. They resisted all inducements to settle in Massachusetts, and in 1638 founded a colony of their own at what is now New Haven. Their title rested entirely on purchase from the Indians, as did all their subsequent extensions.

"When their stronger neighbor, the Connecticut colony, by its Fenwick purchase acquired a pseudo title under the Say and Sele grant, the New Haven colony at first showed signs of a disposition to assert the Stirling grant as perhaps giving it some kind of a paper title, beyond its mere purchases on Long Island, but it soon settled back for its right to existence upon its Indian purchases and its recognition as a member of the New England Union in 1643.

"There were thus, in 1638, three independent colonies within the present limits of Connecticut, one of them, the Saybrook colony, rested on a paper title, which rested on nothing and was never perfected. The other two, the survivors after 1644, had not even a baseless paper title to rest upon. Without a shadow of reliance upon authority they formed their own governments, proprio rigore, made war, peace, and alliances, levied taxes and collected customs.

"In 1643, they united with Plymouth and Massachusetts Bay in the New England Union. In 1650, they joined in the treaty at Hartford with Governor Stuyvesant which put the boundary between New York and Connecticut.

* * * * *

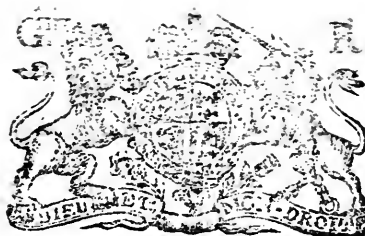

"The first settlement of Connecticut was thus the migration of three distinct and individual town organizations out of the jurisdiction of Massachusetts and into absolute freedom.

* * * * *

"January 14, 1638 (9), the little commonwealth formed the first American Constitution at Hartford. So far as its provisions are concerned, the king, the Parliament, the Plymouth Council, the Warwick grant, the Say and Sele grant, might as well have been non-existent; not one of them is mentioned. It is made according to the preamble on the authority of the people dwelling on the 'River of Connecticutte and the Lands thereunto adioyning'; its objects are to establish 'an orderly and decent Government which should order and dispose of the affayres of the people,' and to maintain 'the liberty and purity of the gospell,' and 'the disciplyne of the churches,' and for these purposes, its authors 'doe therefore associate and conjoyne ourselves to be as one Publike State or Comonwealth.'" The only sovereignty recognized in the Constitution as the oaths of office prescribed by it, is that of the people. It cannot, therefore, be said that the government of Connecticut was formed by the three towns, though it undeniably grew out of them, and was conditioned on every side by their precedent existence.

"The acquisition of the Charter in 1662 raised the Connecticut leaders to the seventh heaven of satisfaction. And well it might, for it was a grant of privileges with hardly a limitation. Practically the king had given Winthrop carte blanche and allowed him to frame the charter to suit himself. It incorporated the freeman

SATIRE ON THE GOVERNORS OF CONNECTICUT.

A CONNECTICUT BALLAD OF 1769.*

A copy of this curious production is preserved among the Trumbull papers in the possession of the Connecticut Historical Society. The author's name is unknown. He evidently belonged to the conservative and anti-revolutionary party, and from his sneers at the "chaplains" and "black coats" does not appear to have been a friend to the standing order. It was written during the canvass for Governor which preceded the election of the first Gov. Trumbull, but, though probably circulated in manuscript like other party squibs of the day, has hitherto remained unpublished. It is worthy of preservation as a curious epitome of Connecticut history, as well as for its intrinsic merits of wit, point, and a smoother versification than is often met with in similar compositions of the period. OBSERVATIONS ON THE SEVERAL COMMANDERS OF THE SHIP CONNECTICUT: OCT. 10, 1769:
(1) BY AN OLD DECREPID SEAMAN WHO LAMENTS THE SHIP'S MISFORTUNES. TO THE TUNE OF "THE VICAR OF BRAY."

"Sic transit Gloria Mundi."

In sixteen hundred sixty-two,
When John, the first, (2) was Pilot,
Our ship was rigg'd, well-trimm'd and new,
And sail'd as clean as a fly-boat.
The Crew, tho' cull'd from different Ships; (3)
Each gloried in his Charter,
And with one voice would celebrate
The Son of the Royal Martyr.

CHOR.—And this is what I will maintain,
As long as life shall be, Sir,
That I will ever laud him most,
Who does most good to me, Sir.

*This article originally appeared in the Hartford Evening Press of July 6, 1857, and has been revised for the Historical Magazine by the annotator.

- (1.) A few days after the Death of Gov. William Pitkin, who died Oct. 1, 1769.
- (2.) John Winthrop, first Governor of Connecticut colony under the Charter of 1662.
- (3.) Alluding to the union of the colonies of Connecticut and New Haven, under the same charter.

When Bob (4) succeeded in command,
 He cries, "My Lads, be honest!
 Desire no more, by sea or land,
 Than's bought or won by conquest;
 Let justice equally be done
 To soldier and to seamen;
 Each be content with what's his own,
 Nor injure the rights of Freeman."

CHOR.—And this is what I will maintain,
 Unto my dying day, Sir,—
 If the crew had heard to Bob's advice,
 They ne'er had gone astray, Sir.

When Bob was dead, another John (5)
 Was chose our Ship's commander,
 Who never sailed far from Home,
 But mostly dwelt on Land, (6) Sir.
 The Chaplain (7) was his Aid-de-camp,
 His Clerk, yea, his Director,
 And midshipmen and fore-mast hands
 Were govern'd at his beck, Sir.

CHOR.—And this is what I will maintain,
 Unto my dying day, Sir,—
 Whene'er the Chaplain guides the Helm,
 The Ship will go astray, Sir.

This Black-Coat so caress'd the Crew,
 That when John kick'd the bucket,
 He was confirmed in the sole command,
 Who long before had took it.

(4.) The writer passes over the administration of Gov. William Leete (1676–83), without notice. He was succeeded by Robert Treat, who held the office from 1683 to the abrogation of charter government, in 1687, and, after the expulsion of Andros, was again chosen governor, and continued in office until 1698.

(5.) Fitz John Winthrop, major-general and commander-in-chief of the land forces destined for the reduction of Canada, in the disastrous expedition of 1690; appointed the colony's agent to present a petition to the British throne in 1694, for a confirmation of the right to command the militia, which had been challenged by Gov. Fletcher; his successful agency added greatly to his popularity, and probably led to his election as governor, in the place of Gov. Treat, shortly after his return from England, May, 1698.

(6.) The two Winthrops were largely landed proprietors, by grants from the Colony and Indian Sachems, and by purchase. The extent of some of these grants and the participation of Fitz John Winthrop in the conflict of claims growing out of disputed Indian titles, gave point to the writer's allusion.

(7.) The Rev. Gurdon Saltonstall,—Gov. Winthrop's minister, in the church at New London, his intimate friend and constant adviser, the main stay and support of his administration, and his successor in the office of governor. Mr. Saltonstall's influence in the church and with the ministers was almost unbounded, and his commanding talents and intimate acquaintance with public affairs soon gave him such a position in the colony as to justify the application of all the titles which are here given him.

Hierarchy prevailed on board,
 Doctrines of Grace at th' highest,—
 And none but Christians could have grog,
 'T was Law, — who dare deny it ? (8)

CHOR.— And this is what I will maintain,
 And to none will knock under,—
 That Crew will love the Captain best
 Who allows most grog and plunder.

The next upon the quarter-deck
 Was Joe, (9) as black as a cloud, Sir,
 Who mustard loved full well, 'tis said,
 But ne'er made or used Powder.
 During his stay near half the Crew
 Were seized with religious frenzies,
 And about the Ship from stem to stern,
 They ape'd St. Vitus's dances. (10)

CHOR.— This truth is what I will maintain,
 Which I did then discover,—
 When an Ass would run, give him the rein,
 And his frolic will soon be over. (11)

Our next Commander, Jonathan, (12)
 Was deeply skilled in Law, Sir

(8.) Gov. Winthrop died at Boston, Nov. 27, 1707, and Mr. Saltonstall was called from the charge of his church and people to fill the governor's chair, and was annually re-elected until his death, in 1724. "A friend to law and order, he would have men submit to authority and live soberly, taking reason and religion for their guides. He loved synods and councils, and was for giving them large power. . . . The platform of ecclesiastical discipline formed at Saybrook, accepted by most of the churches and established as the law of the State in October, 1808, . . . owed much to his counsels and influence." (Miss Caulkin's Hist. of N. London, p. 3, 7.) Against this verse the writer has a note. "Indians had no more right to Law than Wolves or Foxes. B's Election Sermon." This perhaps alluded to a sermon preached by Rev. John Bulkley, at the election in 1713, on "the necessity of Religion in Societies." In discussing the proposition that "Enemies to religion are enemies to the State," Mr. Bulkley likens the state of "the Gentile world" to "that of the fishes in the sea" and "the beasts in the wilderness" (though he by no means warrants the deduction that they are not entitled to the protection of the law).

(9.) Joseph Talcott, governor from 1724 to 1741.

(10.) This refers to the great revival, of 1740-42,—more particularly to the effects of Whitefield's preaching, the rise of new lights, and the excesses of the Rev. James Davenport and his followers. "He gave an unrestrained liberty to noise and outcry, both of distress and joy, in time of divine service. He promoted both with all his might, raising his voice to the highest pitch, together with the most violent agitations of body," &c. (Trumbull's Conn., II, 161).

(11.) Gov. Talcott, if he did not directly countenance, thought it unadvisable to resort to any extraordinary means, or the enactment of penal laws, for the suppression of these disorders.

(12.) Jonathan Law, of Milford, lieutenant-governor, 1725-1741; governor, 1741-1750. Died in office.

And as honest a man of that knavish clan
 As ever appear'd at the bar, Sir,
 He cleaned the Ship, mounted the guns,
 And if I am not mistaken,
 The very first cruise he ever made,
 Proud Louisbourg was taken. (13)

CHOR.—And this is what I have observed,
 Of folks who've been new lighting,—
 Like Saracens, Saints Soldiers make,
 And prove their faith by fighting.

Who next succeeded to the helm
 Was stately, smoking Roger; (14)
 The same to Cape Breton had been,
 But no Seamen or Soldier.
 During his cruise a Spanish Snow (15)
 Fired on him a broad-side, Sir;
 He receiv'd a wound by a golden ball,—
 Of which wound he died, Sir.

CHOR.—And this is what I will maintain,
 Let friend or foe be grieved,—
 If Roger ne'er had seen that Snow,
 He might have longer lived!

Old Captain Pitch (16) commanded next,—
 A skillful navigator,
 And as good a seaman as ever turned
 His hardy face to weather.

(13.) Louisburg surrendered, June 17, 1745. "The Colony of Connecticut employed in this enterprise more than a thousand men." (Trumbull's Conn., II, 281-2).

(14.) Roger Wolcott, Governor from 1750-1754. In 1745, he was appointed commander-in-chief of the Connecticut forces in the expedition against Louisburg, and was Colonel Pepperell's second in command, at the taking of that post, with the Island of Cape Breton.

(15.) The affair of the Spanish Snow (or ship),—one of the most curious episodes in the history of the Colony, is told by Dr. Trumbull (II, 298-300), and more particularly by Miss Calkins in the History of New London, pp. 462-468. This ship put into New London harbor, in distress, Nov., 1752. Her cargo was stored in the town, during the winter; before spring, a considerable part of it was lost or stolen. No effectual means were taken by the government of the Colony, to discover the missing goods or detect and punish the offenders. Gov. Wolcott was much blamed for showing so little activity,—and the freemen were so much disaffected that he was not re-elected governor, and appears never to have regained his former popularity.

(16.) Thomas Fitch; chosen Governor, in the place of Roger Wolcott, in 1754. He was first elected an assistant in 1734; Lieutenant-Governor in 1750. After the passage of the Stamp Act, Gov. Fitch advocated submission to the law, and was first to propose, at a meeting of the council, that they should take the oath required by the act. At the next election, he was left out of office.

When a mutiny on board the Ship,
 Fomented by Chaplain and Gunner, (17)
 Drove Captain Pitch from the quarter-deck,
 And the Ship was most undone, Sir.

CHOR.—Now this is what I will maintain,
 Let who will it gainsay, Sir,—
 Whene'er the Crew has mutinied
 The Chaplain has been in the fray, Sir.

Our old friend Will (18) next took the Helm,
 Who'd cruised for many years, Sir,
 And steer'd as well, when the weather was calm
 As any Tar on board, Sir.
 His friendly art succeeded now
 To accomplish every measure,
 By a "How do you do," with a decent Bow,
 And a shaking of hands forever.

CHOR.—Now this is what I will maintain,
 As the judgment of one Freeman,—
 That his bowing his head and shaking of hands
 Was done to please the Seamen.

Now Will is dead, and his Purser broke, (19)
 I know not who'll come next, Sir;
 The Seamen call for old Pitch again,—
 Affairs are sore perplexed, Sir.

(17.) Alluding to the efficient opposition of the clergy to the Stamp Act, "The Congregational ministers," says Gordon, "saw farther into the designs of the British administration than the bulk of the Colony; and by their publications and conversation, increased and strengthened the opposition." (I, 119.)

[Lieutenant-Governor Pitkin, who was the first to remonstrate with Gov. Fitch against his taking the oath to support the "Stamp Act," was elected in opposition to Fitch, whom he succeeded at the next election by an overwhelming majority. Jonathan Trumbull, who was a member of Gov. Fitch's council, and also remonstrated, together with William Pitkin and others, was elected Governor at the death of Gov. Pitkin three and a half years later.]

(18.) William Pitkin, elected Governor in 1766, held the office till his death, in Oct., 1769. He had been a member of the council since 1734, and Lieutenant-Governor for twelve years.

(19.) The "Purser" was Jonathan Trumbull (then Lieutenant-Governor), who had recently lost all his property by a mercantile failure. "He had been for years a successful merchant," writes his son, Col. John Trumbull, "and looked forward to an age of ease and affluence; but in one season, almost every vessel and all the property which he had upon the ocean was swept away, and he was a poor man at so late a period in life, as left no hope of retrieving his affairs." (Col. Trumbull's Autobiography, p. 8.)

But the Gunners (20) and some midshippers
 Are making an insurrection,
 And would rather the ship should founder quite
 Than be saved by Pitch's inspection.

CHOR.—But this is what I will maintain,
 In spite of Gunners and all, Sir,—
 If Pitch can save the Ship once more,
 'Tis best he overhaul her! AMEN.

(20.) The "Gunners" here, as in the preceding verse, probably alludes to the opposition of the military, as the "Chaplain," to that of the Congregational clergy, to the Stamp Act, and the measures which followed in its train. Colonels Putnam and John Durkee were active and determined in this opposition. The former was deputed to wait on Gov. Fitch to express to him the sentiments of the people, respecting the Stamp Act, and the report which Col. Humphreys had given, of the conference, certainly authorizes the application to Putnam of the charge of aiding to "foment the mutiny." Col. Durkee was the leader of the "Sons of Liberty," in the movement which extorted from Stamp-master Ingersoll his resignation, in 1765. Col. Jonathan Trumbull,—who had been the first of Gov. Fitch's council to "mutiny" (when the proposition was made for taking the oath to support the Stamp Act), was elected as Mr. Pitkin's successor, in opposition to Gov. Fitch, who was the candidate of the moderate and more loyal "seamen."

posterity, in their preservation and protection, amidst variety of perils and hardships to which they were exposed and subjected; and in the grant and security of great and invaluable privileges, immunities and blessings which have been handed down, and at this day happily enjoyed by us. And when of late we were involved in great difficulties and distresses in regard to some of the most important interests of this and the other British colonies and plantations in America; then, our most gracious God, the almighty governor did interpose, and raise up wise, able and faithful friends and advocates to solicit, and dispose the heart of our gracious king, and the parliament of Great Britain, to show their clemency and indulgence to the people of America, in the beneficial repeal of the late act of parliament, so effecting and grievous to them! and thereby doth give a happy prospect of the restoration of peace and tranquility. Which signal expressions of divine goodness, demand from us the most sincere returns of gratitude, thanksgiving and public praises to the bountiful author of all good.

Therefore,

* * * * * Have thought fit, by and with the advice of the council, and at the * * * * * desire of the representatives in general court assembled, to appoint
 * * I * * and do hereby appoint Thursday, the twenty-fifth day of this
 * * * * * instant, June, to be religiously observed as a day of public Thanks-
 * * * * * giving throughout this colony; earnestly exhorting all his majesty's subjects, ministers and people, in their several religious assemblies, with joy and gladness of heart, to magnify the Lord, and with devout and thankful minds, to glorify his holy name, for his goodness herein wonderfully manifested.

Also, to offer up supplications to Almighty God, for our sovereign lord, King George the Third, for our gracious Queen Charlotte, their royal highnesses, George Prince of Wales, the Princess Dowager of Wales, and all the royal family. That God would preside in and direct the king's councils; overrule the present situation of public affairs, for the continuation of liberty and peace in our nation and land; graciously continue to this colony our most valuable liberties and privileges, civil and sacred; dispose us to a wise and thankful improvement of them; give us favor in the sight of our most gracious king; bless our agency at the British court; promote harmony and concord between Great Britain and her colonies; heal all unhappy divisions; grant Divine wisdom, council and faithfulness to all in civil and sacred employment; prevent animosities and faction; cause justice, righteousness and peace to flourish; and bestow upon us abundance of his goodness and mercy.

And all servile labor is forbidden on that day.

Given under my hand at the council chamber in Hartford, the twelfth day of June, in the sixth year of the reign of our sovereign lord George the Third, of Great Britain, France and Ireland, king, defender of the faith, etc., and in the year of our Lord, 1776.

WILLIAM PITKIN.

GOD SAVE THE KING.

CHAPTER X.

HARTFORD, EAST SIDE.

“And eastward they inhabited unto the entering in of the wilderness from the river.”—I Chron. v, 9.

Hartford settlers commenced at an early day to avail themselves of the land on the east side of the river; and as early as 1641, a distribution of some of the meadow land took place, but not wholly till later.

In 1640, the upland was ordered divided, but for some reason no division took place till 1666, or at least no general division.

William Pitkin, 1st, was one of its early settlers and largest landowner on that side of the river. He owned eight hundred and fourteen (814) acres (John Crow, in connection with his father-in-law, William Goodwin, seven hundred and seventy-six (776) acres), and some of his land was bought directly from the Indians.

“Joshua Uncas, son of Uncas of Monheag, in his will gives and bequeathes, all that tracke of land lying from the mountains in sight of Hartford, north-ward to a place called ‘Shenipipi’ (now Coventry), east to Willimantucke (Willimantic) River; south to said river, and to Hartford’s bounds, except as already sold three hundred (300) acres to Mr. John Talcott, and two hundred (200) to Capt. Thomas Bull, according to a mappe as above said.” Here follow the names of William Pitkin, Thomas Burnham, and twelve others, between whom this land was to be equally divided, “into as many parts as there are persons.” This deed was witnessed by three white men and two Indians, and signed by Joshua Sachem, by his mark +, April, 1684.*

In the early settlement, all conveyances and beasts were obliged to ford the Great River reaching the east bank, a few rods north of the present bridge, where the old road may still be seen, running from the river, east, till it joins the north meadow road, of which it is a continuation. This was one of the earliest roads on the East Side, and was ordered laid out as a highway in 1640, but it was not done, although in use, as in 1678 it was again ordered laid out from Main Street to the river somewhere between Mr. Crow’s and “William Pitkin his house,” and it was so laid out from the house of William Buckland, midway between Mr. Crow’s and Mr. Pitkin’s, to the river, and probably from William Buckland’s house to the new or second Main Street, which at that time had been laid out and so remains to this day; (see map this chapter) although the west end of it, from the river to the lumberyard, has been of little use since the ferry-boat was run south of the bridge, or 1808. It once ran north of it, landing at the ford. This is the ferry mentioned in the division of the town, in 1783. Here Daniel Pitkin, Sr., kept a hotel for many years.

Our town records mention the fact that boats were impressed in 1675 to carry the troops across the river. Probably these boats were the property of the East Side proprietors and for private ferriage, as a public ferry is first mentioned in 1681. Two ferries were running in 1805. Probably one at the north and one at the south landing.

After the ferry was located south of the bridge, a road was laid out from the landing, running east to what is now Kellogg's corner, and then running north till it intersected the first north meadow road.

At this south ferry landing, on the elevated ground north of it, Daniel Pitkin, 2d, once kept a hotel. After the bridge was built in 1808, he built a second hotel on the north side of the bridge road, where now is a stone-cutter's yard. West of this, his son, Ralph Pitkin, kept a store for many years.

The first highway laid out on the upland, was ordered in 1640, but it was not done till 1660 or 1666, when Mr. John Crow and Mr. William Pitkin were ordered to "lay out a highway as near the meadow bank or boggy swamp as may be." This was the first Main Street on the East Side, now Prospect Street, and extended along the meadow bank from Windsor to Glastonbury. After the Hockanum bridge was built, this street was closed from Mr. Buckland's to the ford, but afterwards opened from Mr. Buckland's to the bridge road.

Mr. John Crow built his house on this street, near where it crossed the Hockanum River, at the ford to Glastonbury. The location commanded a view of the meadow and the Great River, as well as a view of the Hockanum River, to the eastward. William Pitkin also built his house on this street, on a slight elevation just north of Pitkin Lane. A lovely spot (especially to the writer, as here he was born and spent his boyhood days), commanding as it did a view of the beautiful meadow for miles, and of the Great River towards Windsor, also of the meadow on the south, and the settlement, now the city, of Hartford, on the west bank, and the thickly wooded Talcott Mountains clearly defined for many miles against the western horizon.

This was the ancestral home of the Pitkins in America, and had been in the family from its original settlement in 1660-61 till 1871, when it, unnecessarily, passed from the ownership of the family.

Of the several roads leading from the uplands into the meadows was one, starting near the house of the first William Pitkin (a continuation of Pitkin Lane) and leading to the Pitkin Wharf on the Connecticut River, intersecting a road running the entire length of the north meadows north and south and crossing which, leads on to the wharf at the river. This wharf, it is believed, was located some distance north of the ford, and not far from the house farthest north in the meadow. There were other wharves still north, or above this, in the early times.

Vessels discharged their cargoes here, groceries and other merchandise for the stores, for it must be remembered that the East Side was no small factor in the town in those days. In 1761, it had a population of sixteen hundred, while the West Side had only twenty-four hundred. In 1774, the East Side had two thousand souls, while the west side of the river numbered but three thousand.

The vessels were reloaded with powder and anchors from the Forge, and from the manufactures on the East Side, which at this time was much the largest manufacturing town in the State, both as to its variety and amounts ("Barber's Connecticut," page 73). In the troubled times with the Indians, in 1689, William Pitkin, 1st,* and three others, were appointed a committee to fortify four houses on the East Side. One of these fortifications was a fort built on the homestead of William Pitkin, just north of his house.

Again, in 1704, William Pitkin, 2d, was one of a "Committee of Safety," to attend to the fortification of said houses, and during these troubles the neighboring settlers were called at night into the Pitkin Fort by the ringing of a bell. Who were the neighboring settlers? Surely, the Goodwins, Olmstedes, Cowles, Meakins, Roberts, and Bucklands, with Capt. Roger, Ozias, and Nathaniel of the Pitkin families, and later, the Stanleys, Williams, and Smiths; but the anticipated danger was more than the reality at this time. Portions of the old stone oven or chimney in the fort have remained within the memory of the writer's grandfather, or until about 1775; and many of the stones within the memory of the writer.

On the first Main street, and near the first William Pitkin, lived his oldest son Roger, named for the brother left in England (see letter from England, in 1667, page xx), and later, lived Jonathan Pitkin, son of Roger. In 1670, a second Main street, the present one, was laid out, six rods wide, intersecting with the first Main street at the corner, or house of Lieut. Wm. Stanley, (and afterwards the home of James Stanley.) at its north terminus and at the ford, near the house of Mr. John Crow, its southern terminus, until the completion of the bridge over the Hockanum River—commenced in 1700, when William Pitkin, 2d, Capt. Nichols, and John Marsh were appointed to view a place, and ordered a bridge built across the Hockanum River at the town's charge; but the approaches to the bridge were not sufficiently raised above high water till 1730-31.

After the opening of the second Main street, of which Prof. B. G. Northrop, Secretary of the Connecticut State Board of Education, said, "It is unsurpassed in this country for its beautiful elm trees, an unbroken line of which stand in the center of the street nearly its entire length, with a row on each side of the street almost all of the distance." A view of a small portion of which is here given.

William Pitkin, second son of William, 1st, built on that street, on his father's land, and directly east of his father's house; Colonel John and Colonel Joseph, sons of William, 2d, both built north of their father, but still on the homestead ; while his son, William, 3d, afterwards Governor of Connecticut, built on the opposite side of Main street, one-half of a mile north. The writer well remembers the old house, with its ornamental door-mountings and surroundings.

* Four William Pitkins in succession, all prominently identified with colonial affairs, have caused some mistakes in colonial history, and that all may understand which person is meant, it has been thought best to mention them as William 1st, 2d, 3d, etc., also, with Rogers, Johns, and Josephs.

Four sons of Gov. William Pitkin, built immediately by their father's residence, two on each side of the street. One son, Rev. Timothy Pitkin, settled in Farmington, Conn.

Hannah, the daughter of the first William, married Deacon Timothy Cowles, and lived one-fourth of a mile north of Gov. Pitkin.

Many other Pitkins settled on this street. In fact, it will be seen by the following map, that of ninety houses, stores and manufactories, previous to 1840, between the north and south forks of the road on Main street, fifty or over one-half were owned and occupied by Pitkins or families with Pitkin mothers.

Commencing at the north forks, on Main street, on the east side, the first house was Deacon Timothy Cowles, who married Hannah Pitkin, daughter of William Pitkin, 1st. The second, was the Joshua Pitkin house. Many years later a carriage-shop was built north of this house, by the Olmsteds. Next was the house of Theodore Stanley, who married Elizabeth Pitkin. The next was the house of Reuben Cowles, now the homestead of William M. Stanley, Esq., whose mother was Temperance Pitkin, granddaughter of Gov. William Pitkin, and whose grandmother was Elizabeth Pitkin, daughter of Roger Pitkin. Next came the clothing shop of the Pitkins, and next the house of Col. George Pitkin, son of the Governor. This house is still standing. Then came the house of Gov. Pitkin, and on an elevation south of the lane, the house of Epaphras Pitkin, also son of the Governor.

Later, Nathaniel Pitkin built on this place, a little front of the Epaphras Pitkin house. A clothier's shop also, stood north of this house, in which Nathaniel Pitkin and James Stanley carried on the clothing business until 1817.

Many years later, to the southeast, and standing back from the street, a house was built by George Pitkin, son of George.

After passing a small school-house, and across the lane, was the house of Elisha Stanley, whose mother was Elizabeth Pitkin. Northeast of this house, also, stood a clothier's shop, carried on by Col. Ashbel and Elisha Stanley.

After passing the North Center School, was the house of Nathan Olmsted, and next the house of John Hurlburt. Some rods south of them a house was built and occupied by Henry Pitkin, son of Capt. John Pitkin, and next was the Rogers house on the corner.

Again, on the south corner of Bidwell's — later Bigelow Lane — was the house of Daniel, and afterward, William Bigelow. Formerly a hotel was kept on this site.

Next was a house occupied by C. Comstock, and beside this was the Academy School, and then comes the old Cornelius Welles tavern, formerly kept by the Woodbridges, and now standing.

Next was a house owned and occupied by Timothy Pitkin, and built, probably, by his father, 'Squire Elisha Pitkin. This house is said to have been shingled on the day of the battle of Bunker Hill.

Then comes the house of Dr. Samuel Flagg (now standing), whose son William married Susannah Pitkin, and son, James Flagg, married Emily Pitkin.

Next was a house with a store in the lower story, formerly kept by Daniel Pitkin, Jr., and afterward by Mr. Foster. Next was a house once occupied by the Merrow family. Then comes the homestead of the Goodwins, descendants of Deacon John Goodwin, whose wife was Dorothy Pitkin, daughter of Caleb Pitkin. He was a nephew of Hannah Goodwin, who married William Pitkin, 1st. The first Deacon John Goodwin was the first settler by the name of Goodwin on the East Side. On this homestead are now the three Goodwin houses, as follows: First, Edward Goodwin, next James Goodwin, and then the homestead of Capt. Joseph Goodwin, father of Edward and James. Beside this was the store of Capt. Joseph Goodwin, in which was the East Hartford post-office for many years. Next was the Academy School, standing in front of the cemetery, mentioned later. Then the house of J. R. Belden, who married Julia Pitkin, daughter of Nathan Pitkin. Next came the Carver house. The next house was formerly occupied by Horace Olmsted. Next was the house of Giles Olmsted, and then the house of David Deming, and next the Isaac Roberts house; and, standing back from the street, was the Hezekiah Roberts house, afterward occupied by Benjamin Roberts, whose wife was Dorothy Pitkin, daughter of Nathaniel Pitkin, and whose son, Benjamin Roberts, Jr., married Dorothy Pitkin Goodwin, granddaughter of Caleb Pitkin.

Then comes the house, now standing, of the Rev. Eliphalet Williams. Next came the wool-carding and grinding mill of Elisha Pitkin, the power for which mill was furnished by damming the Hockanum River. Afterward a large hatting business was carried on here by Joseph Pitkin. This was the last building on the east side of Main street, to the south forks of the road. Here stood the Third Church of Hartford, so-called till East Hartford was incorporated a separate town in 1783 — for nearly ninety years (see Church Organization, Chapter VIII). Looking south from this point on the road to the ford, may still be seen the house of Ozias Roberts; and on this site was the home of John Crow (one of the early settlers), who married Elizabeth, only child of William Goodwin, ruling elder of the First Church of Hartford.

Commencing again on the west side of the street, at the south forks of the road, we have first the store of Elisha Pitkin. In connection with this store, an amusing incident was published in Barber's "Connecticut," page 75:

"On the 17th ult., at East Hartford, sallied from the Lyon Tavern* and its dependencies, a corps of female infantry, of twenty rank and file, with a flank guard of three chosen spirits of the male line; and marching westward about one mile in martial array and excellent order, saving stride and gabble, these attacked and carried without opposition from powder, law, or conscience, Mr. Pitkin's store, in which was lodged a quantity of sugar designed for the army, of which they plundered and bore away in triumph 218 pounds. A traveling gentleman falling in with their rear, who they mistook for the owner of the spoils, was attacked and drove with great fury, but, being well mounted, made his escape. The whole was completed in two hours, and without loss of blood, except from a few accidental scratches of side arms underslung without scabbards. That so unexampled a spirit of heroism may not want the notice and encouragement, it is proposed that this corps be augmented by voluntary enlistment to a battalion, for the ranging service, in the northern department, to be in the uniform of rifle frocks and the snug Scotch kilt, and allowed, beside perquisite and plunder, a generous bounty on scalps, and a fine new standard, with an elegant device of a lady inverted, and to be commanded by the celebrated Madame de la Mell Hobb Greg Scratch."

* We have not been able to locate the Lyon Tavern, but think it must have been on Silver Lane, and this store must be the one, as we find no other Pitkin, keeping a store at this date.

Beside the store of Elisha Pitkin, on the corner, stood his house, both still standing, formerly called the "Minister's Hotel," by reason of the owner's hospitality to all of that calling.

On the opposite corner stands a house built by Dr. Edward Pitkin, but never occupied by him, he having lived in the house of his father, Esquire Elisha, after his death.

Next north, was the house of Gen. S. L. Pitkin, son of Maj. Samuel Pitkin, and next to this, the house of Maj. Samuel Pitkin, son of Esquire Elisha Pitkin.

Some rods north of this house was the house of Sidney Pitkin, son of John Pitkin, and beside this was the house of Daniel Pitkin, and later the home of Rev. Samuel Spring, who was a descendant of the Pitkins, his great grandmother being Sarah Pitkin, daughter of William Pitkin, 2d.

After passing the Congregational Church, built in 1836 (where once stood the home of Epaphras Olmsted), on the opposite corner stands the house of Capt. Aaron Olmsted, and later the home of Charles H. Olmsted, whose word and manuscript were authority on genealogy and town history.

Next was the house of Caleb Goodwin, whose mother was Dorothy Pitkin, and next on the corner was the hotel kept by Richard Goodwin, whose mother was also Dorothy Pitkin. This hotel was afterward kept by Henry Phelps.

On the north corner stood the house of Lemuel White, Esq., whose wife was the daughter of Jerusha Pitkin, who married John Welles. Esquire White was the first post-master in East Hartford, in 1806. Next to this was the Metcalf house, and beside this the Merrow house, and again the home of the Meakins; then the Capt. Gideon Olmsted house, and beyond this the house of Osmyn Pitkin, son of John Pitkin; then the house of Samuel Kellogg. Next to this, though some years later, was the Harrington, and —afterwards the Hallett— house and tannery. On the corner was the Richard Goodwin house. His daughter, Emily, married James Fitch, and afterward occupied it.

On the opposite corner of Pitkin Lane, afterward called Benjamin Lane, stood the John Benjamin hotel, afterward the home of Shubael Griswold, and later of Erastus Woodruff.

The next house was occupied by Dr. Pardon Brownell.

Next came the house, now standing, of Theodore Pitkin, son of William, 4th. He afterwards lived in the third house on the north side of Bidwell or Bigelow Lane, and later went to Rochester, N. Y., to live with his son, Hon. William Pitkin.

Next above was the house of William Pitkin, 2d, standing back from the street, directly east from and on his father's—the first William Pitkin's—homestead, which was cut in two in opening the second Main street in 1670.

Next was the house of John Pitkin, son of Colonel John, which was afterward occupied by his son, Captain John, brother of Osmyn and Sidney. Just north and west stood the watch and silverware manufactory of the four sons of Capt. John Pitkin. (See Manufacturing Interest, Chap XII.)

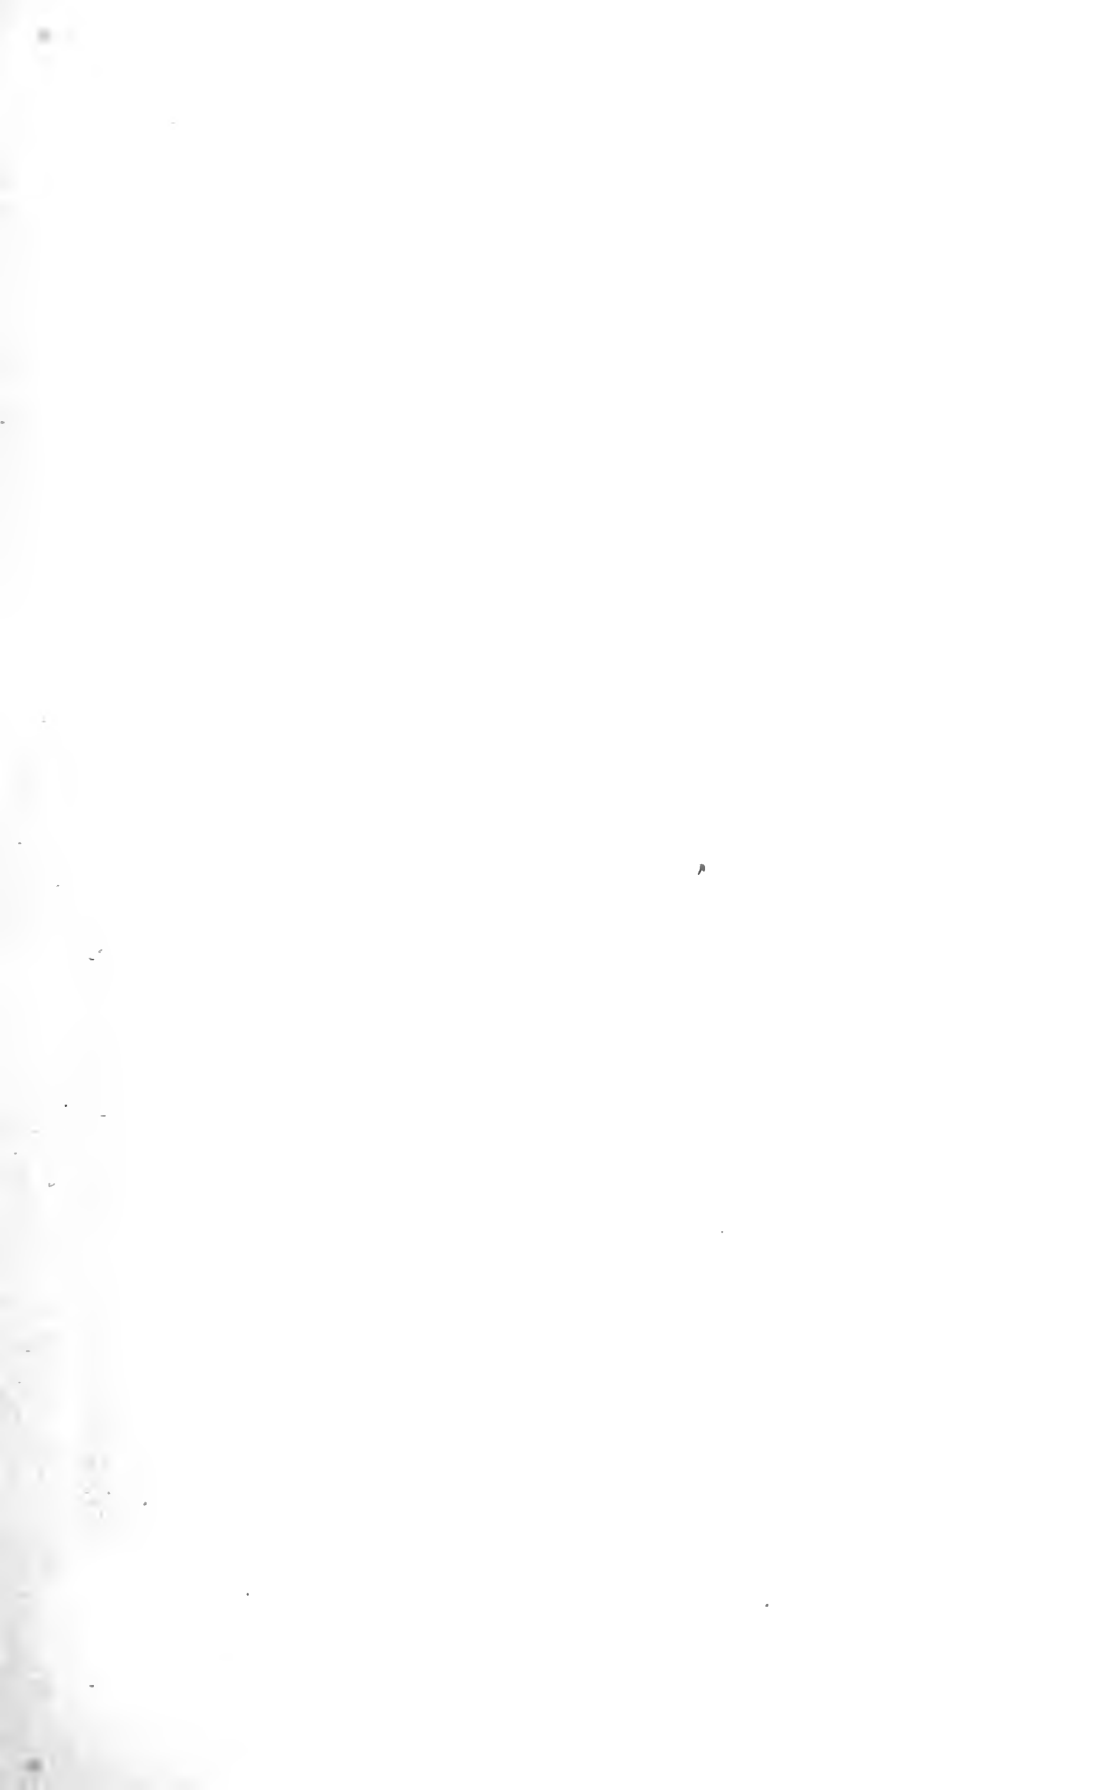

Next to this, standing further back, was once the hat-shop of Roswell Pitkin (son of Elisha), who lived and died in the house just north, which was built by his grandfather, Col. Joseph Pitkin, who married the celebrated Mary Lord. This is believed to be the oldest house standing in East Hartford, having been built about 1724. It was afterwards known as the Stewart house. This house formerly had diamond-shaped windows and panes, and had elaborately ornamented walls, stair-cases, and fire-places, and was thought to be one of the grandest houses in its day.

And back of this was the clothing shop of Col. Joseph Pitkin, afterwards occupied, we think, by Timothy Olmsted, musician. Next to this was the house of Elisha Olmsted, and above on the corner, where the first and second Main streets intersect, stood the house of Theodore Stanley (son of Lieut. William Stanley), who married Elizabeth Pitkin, daughter of Roger Pitkin, 2d, and whose son, James Stanley, married Temperance Pitkin, granddaughter of Gov. William Pitkin. James Stanley also, lived here after his father.

On the opposite corner, lived William Olmsted (son of Deacon Joseph Olmsted 2d), who married Elizabeth Pitkin, daughter of Ozias Pitkin. His son, William Olmsted, 2d, married Anna Pitkin, daughter of William Pitkin, and granddaughter of Gov. Pitkin. This was afterward the home of Perseus Olmsted.

Some rods north of this lived Rev. Ashbel Pitkin, son of Gov. Pitkin, who lived nearly opposite. Above this lived Col. William Pitkin, 4th, another son of the Governor. Next was the house of William Olmsted, who married Anna Pitkin, and here later lived Nathaniel Olmsted.

Again, north of this lived Joseph Pitkin, son of Joseph. Afterward a new house was built here by his nephew, Capt. Martin Stanley, whose mother was Elizabeth Pitkin; and in a building south of the house, Capt. Stanley carried on the hatting business. North of this, on quite an elevation, was the house of Nathaniel Pitkin, brother of Joshua; afterward his son David lived here. Next came the homestead of Anson Cowles, and next to this his son William C. Cowles. Above this was the house of Col. Solomon Olmsted, whose mother was Anna Pitkin, daughter of William Pitkin, 4th, and whose grandmother was Elizabeth Pitkin, daughter of Ozias Pitkin. This house was built by Buckland Goodwin. This brings us back to the north forks of the road, in which stood a house once occupied by Horace Pitkin, formerly owned by Levi Goodwin, whose mother was Dorothy Pitkin. He kept a hotel here in ye olden time.

On the first Main street will be seen the houses of several Pitkins, including the homestead of the first William Pitkin, who married Hannah Goodwin; also the house of his oldest son Roger, and the Pitkin fort, mentioned elsewhere. In the meadow district were the houses of quite a number of Pitkins, including three Pitkin hotels, and the house of Capt. James Pitkin, who commanded the first steam-boat that came up the Connecticut River.

On the present Main street was laid out the first cemetery in Hartford, East Side, and is still in use, though several times enlarged. It was originally purchased of John Pantry, in 1710, and lies next south of the homestead of Deacon John Goodwin.

In this ground lie the remains of Hannah Goodwin, wife of William Pitkin, 1st, the ancestral mother of all by the name of Pitkin in America. A new stone has lately been placed by the side of the old one by the writer, — being a duplicate of one placed beside the old one at the grave of her husband, William Pitkin, in the old Center Church burial ground at Hartford, by the Hon. William Pitkin of Rochester, New York. Views are here given of them.

In this grave-yard may be found the numerous graves and stones of the early Pitkin families, including several tabular monuments raised on columns. One elaborate one to Governor Pitkin, also the old Pitkin tomb, the only one in the yard till 1878, which is still in a fair state of preservation. It has contained the remains of the following members of the Pitkin family, all since removed and interred in the adjoining grounds.

Tell where repose their honored bones;

Have swept from memory these away;
But not their names; these live, as yet,
In hearts that never can forget."

The East Side proprietors asked to be incorporated a separate town as early as 1726; again, in 1728, and also in 1757. In 1764 William Pitkin and one hundred and fifty-four others petitioned the General Court to be set off, but were not successful; again, in 1774 and in 1780. In 1783 the "Memorial" of Col. John Pitkin and others was granted, and East Hartford was incorporated a separate town.

Its first Town Meeting was "warned" November 18, 1783, by George Pitkin, Justice of the Peace, and Daniel and Richard Pitkin, selectmen of Hartford, East Side, "to convene at the Meeting House, at 10 o'clock in the morning, December 2, 1783, to choose town officers." Of the forty one officers chosen for the new town, thirteen, or one-third of the number, were by the name of Pitkin.

"In the affairs of the colony, civil, military, and judicial, our people had a prominent representative through the influential Pitkin family and others, many of whose names live prominently among us to-day." (Goodwin's "East Hartford.")

CHAPTER XI.

MILITARY ORGANIZATION, EAST SIDE.

"All these men of war, that could keep rank, such as went forth to battle."—I. Chron. xii, 36, 38.

In the records of our town, State, and intercolonial relations, we find the Pitkin family fully identified with all its military affairs.

In the early commissioning of the first military company in Hartford, East Side, the then third company, Nineteenth Regiment State Militia, we find the following, commissioned by the General Court :

MATROSS COMPANY.

In 1791, the following fourteen Pitkins, presented a "Memorial" to the General Court, asking for a Charter for an Artillery Company in Hartford, to be located on the East Side, and called the Matross Company:

Samuel Pitkin, Joseph Pitkin, Russel Pitkin, Theodore Pitkin, Joshua Pitkin, Nathaniel Pitkin, Martin Pitkin, Timothy Pitkin, Nathan Pitkin, Oliver Pitkin, George Pitkin, Jr., William Pitkin, David Pitkin, Roswell Pitkin, all members of Matross Company. This was one of the first Charters granted to an artillery company in the State.

Elisha Pitkin, Esquire, was elected its first commander, in 1792. The two brass field pieces required by its charter, were the gift of the Commander, Elisha Pitkin, and were cast at his forge and iron works, at Pitkin Falls. The old records of this company, contain the following extract:

"Considering the elegant uniform of its members, its discipline and equipments, the number and respectability of the individuals comprising it; the brevet rank conferred upon its Commander, and the large and superior band of music attached to it, it may truly be said, that, taken as a whole, it was not surpassed at that time by any military company in the State of Connecticut. It conferred honor upon the town to which it belonged, and was an ornament to the Nineteenth Regiment to which it was attached."

This is not supposed to be a full list of all by the name of Pitkin who participated in the war of the Rebellion, but it is all that have given me the desired information. I would not willingly omit any, but it is impossible to get a complete record on this subject. For further details see their respective pages.

CONNECTICUT IN THE WAR OF THE REBELLION.

Says Gen. Joseph R. Hawley, "the records of History may safely be challenged to parallel the little republic of Connecticut, in what goes to the making of a liberal, free, progressive, honest, and steady government. The call for troops to maintain the Union, against a wicked and causeless war, furnished the largest armies that ever trod the globe, during the largest of all modern wars, in which two and a quarter millions soldiers participated, and three hundred thousand young men laid down their lives (and hundreds of thousands of others came home, broken down with exposure and disease, to speedily fill soldiers' graves), at an expense of eight thousand millions of dollars to maintain; not only the largest army the world has ever known, but the best equipped, best clothed, best fed, best pensioned (of which one and a quarter million men moved at the word of one commander). Connecticut alone furnished forty-eight thousand men, composed of thirty-five regiments and batteries.

CHAPTER XII.

EARLY MANUFACTURES, EAST SIDE.

"Them hath he filled with wisdom of heart, to work all manner of work."—Exodus, xxxvi, 35.

East Hartford was for many years distinguished beyond any other town in our State for the variety and amount of its manufactures.

On an excellent mill stream, known as the Hockanum river, at a place called "Pitkin Falls"—the Pitkins having four dams and mills at those falls—afterward "Scotland," and now "Burnside" or "Scotch side," was built a fulling mill, a powder mill, a foundry for mill screws and other castings, a forge for anchors and iron bars, and a slitting mill for nail and other rods. (Barber's "Conn.," page 73.)

With the manufacturing interests of the State, no family was more largely identified than the Pitkin family, as each and every one of the above mills were built, owned, or carried on by members of the Pitkin family; as also was the first cotton and wool carding-mill in the State of Connecticut. The hatting interests of Connecticut were also carried on largely by the Pitkins. About 1686, Wm. Pitkin, 2d, built, at the uppermost of the two lower falls below the bridge, a fulling mill, which was burned and rebuilt in 1690. He also purchased the falls and power and built a fulling mill at the other lower falls, and both mills were in operation prior to 1706. By his will, these two mills were bequeathed to his sons, William and Joseph, who carried them on in connection with a large clothing business. In 1690 he also owned the works of the upper falls above the bridge, which he leased till 1713, when it was burned, and he erected a new mill. During the Revolution gun-powder was manufactured here by the Pitkins, in addition to that manufactured at their powder-mill, at the Forge falls

In 1747 Col. Joseph Pitkin, at the Forge, or Powder-mill fall, set up a forge for making bar-iron, also a mill for iron slitting; he having been granted the sole privilege of this industry by the General Court for fourteen years. But the British Parliament prohibited this industry, with others, in 1750, which greatly interfered with the manufactures of Connecticut, as well as with other enterprises.

The mother country could not foresee that the prohibition of the iron industry would change these works to the manufacture of powder, during the Revolution and the War of 1812. These mills and others belonging to the Pitkin family were run at a great loss to them pecuniarily—for a young Government too poor to pay for the needed saltpetre or for the powder when made. The first, the Pitkins were ordered to seize for the Government, wherever found; and the latter was partly paid for by grants of sole privileges in other industries, such as glass, snuff, etc.

In 1782, the Pitkins were forging anchors and manufacturing mill screws and nail rods, and in 1797, the guns for the old Artillery Company were cast here, the gift of 'Squire Elisha Pitkin to the company. This mill-site is still called the "Forge" by some of the older inhabitants.

WOOLEN MILLS.

About 1770, Elisha Pitkin had built a mill on the east side of Main street, near the old meeting-house and Hockanum bridge, which was run by water-power, supplied by damming the Hockanum river. Here, beside grinding grain and plaster, was set up the first wool-carding machine, run by power, in the State, and it is believed the first in the country. Many years later, in 1807, the water-power never having proved remunerative, by reason of back-water from the Connecticut river, a large hatting business was carried on here by the Pitkins and others till 1840 or later. Cloth was also manufactured here in 1807, under a patent for making "cloth without yarn," by Joseph Pitkin, son of Elisha.

About 1780 Aaron Buckland, who married Eunice Pitkin, daughter of Richard, owned a mill in which was made plain cloth in hand looms. He also wove blankets by hand for the soldiers in the war of 1812. The mill was next run by Sidney Pitkin, son of Col. John, September, 1824, when power looms were introduced.

On November 19, 1824, Elisha E. Hilliard entered the employ of Sidney Pitkin in this woolen mill, and so continued till 1832. April 1, 1832, commenced the co-partnership of Pitkin & Hilliard, which continued till about 1860, when Mr. Hilliard became sole proprietor. The mill is now run by his son, Mr. E. C. Hilliard, who has his father's original records. This mill was located in East Hartford, now Manchester, and known as Buckland's Station.

In 1790, a woolen mill was started in Hartford, Conn., by Col. Jeremiah Wadsworth; and General Washington delivered his speech to Congress (January, 1790), dressed in a suit of broadcloth, a present from the owners of the factory. (Pitkin's Statistics, page 468.) This is believed to have been the first power loom woolen mill in this State.

COTTON MILLS.

The first cotton mill successfully put in operation in Connecticut was in 1794; and velvets, corduroys, and fustians were manufactured here, in considerable quantities for those times, by Samuel Pitkin, as principal owner, with John Warburton from England, as overseer. This mill was successfully run by the Pitkins, for twenty-five years. It was sold in 1819, to David Watkinson & Brothers, who built an additional mill of stone in 1821; but by reason of being on quicksand, we think, it was taken down and rebuilt a few rods to the north, and finished in 1823; and it was again enlarged in 1849. It was sold or merged into the "Union Manufacturing Co."

They have since added a large brick mill, all of which are in operation to-day, a cotton-mill having been running here nearly a hundred years. This mill was located on the extreme east side of East Hartford. This was then Orford Parish, now Manchester, and near the Manchester depot. This was the first cotton-mill, except one, in this country. One was started just prior to this in Rhode Island, by Almy, Brown & Slater. (Barber's "Conn.," page 89, says Alling; Pitkin's Statistics says Almy.) A few years later a second cotton-mill was built, and operated by Captain Richard Pitkin, a mile east of the Samuel Pitkin mill, and since known as the "Globe Company Cotton Mill." This mill is still running.

In 1775, William and George Pitkin were granted liberty by the General Court, and began at "Pitkin Upper Falls" to manufacture gunpowder. This was the first powder-mill in the State. Here was manufactured gunpowder for the Revolutionary army till 1781.

In 1812, powder was again furnished to the Government from this mill. Powder has been manufactured here ever since, the Pitkins being succeeded by "Hanmer & Forbes," and they in turn by the "Hazard Powder Co.," until 1875. (Hinman's "Connecticut," pages 194-9.) "It is believed to have been the first powder-mill built in this country." (Barber's "Connecticut," page 73.)

In 1784, William Pitkin, by reason of loss in making powder for the Government, was granted the sole privilege of making snuff in the State for fourteen years, exempt from taxation. The town leased to William, George, and Elisha Pitkin, ten acres on the Hockanum river, at Orford Parish, East Hartford, now Manchester, for that purpose.

In 1783, William Pitkin, Elisha Pitkin, and Samuel Bishop started a new enterprise, they having been granted by the Court the sole privilege of manufacturing glass in the State for twenty-four years. The picturesque stone walls of the old glass works, over a hundred years old, are still standing in Manchester, formerly East Hartford, near the home of J. R. Pitkin, Esq., and owned by him. Glass was manufactured here till 1830, and the process of manufacture was a great curiosity to many who came a great distance to see it in the early times. This was the chief place of business in what is now Manchester, at the close of the Revolution. The settlement contained, beside the glass works, a smith shop, a pottery, a store, and tavern.

In 1795, Levi Pitkin was manufacturing clocks at East Hartford. Many of his clocks, made previous to 1799, were sold throughout the State, and several of them may still be found in East Hartford houses. Later, he lived and died with his son, who had an iron and also a bell foundry, at Ogdensburg, New York.

About 1800, Elisha Pitkin, Esq., erected at Hop Brook, Manchester, a building intended for an oil mill, which he sold to Charles Bunce, who converted it into a paper-mill. Mr. Bunce was the ancestor of the Bunce family of Manchester, many of them paper manufacturers.

In October 19, 1807, the first patent ever granted to any one in the country on the manufacture of felt hats, was to Joseph Pitkin, son of Esquire Elisha Pitkin, and Timothy Kimball, a relative by marriage of Esquire Elisha Pitkin, who carried on the manufacture of hats in a building on East Hartford Street near the Hockanum bridge, heretofore mentioned as the wool carding-mill of Elisha Pitkin. The same patent covers a claim and grant to manufacture cloth without yarn. (This may have been in connection with the wool carding department, and is supposed to have been felt cloth.) This was also the first patent granted on felts, in this country.

In April 23, 1808, the second patent on manufacture of hats was granted to Roswell Pitkin, brother of Joseph, and son of Esquire Elisha. He carried on the manufacture of hats in a building standing southwest from the house in which he lived, which was built and occupied by his grandfather, Colonel Joseph Pitkin. This house was afterwards known as the Stuart house, spoken of elsewhere.

October 11, 1828, a patent was granted on soda fountain pumps to Levi Pitkin, jeweler, silversmith, and clock manufacturer, previously mentioned.

A patent was also granted to Dr. Edward Pitkin, December 13, 1828, for improvement in fencing.

In 1821, buttons were manufactured in Ellington, Conn., by Timothy Pitkin, probably in connection with his brother Solomon, who, in 1824, was a merchant in Providence, Rhode Island, in company with Charles Cheney, later one of the "Cheney Brothers." (See Silk Industry of America.)

In 1826, J. O. Pitkin and Walter Pitkin, commenced manufacturing silverware in a building erected west of the house of their father, Captain John Pitkin. In 1834 this business was extended and a branch house established at Vicksburg, Tenn., which was successful till the financial crash of 1837; it was abandoned in 1839.

In 1834, Henry and James F. Pitkin commenced to manufacture the first watches (known as the American Lever Watch) ever made in this country, in a building erected for that purpose north of the house of their father, Captain John Pitkin.

The silversmith manufactory mentioned above, was then moved, and both industries were carried on in the same building. There were about forty workmen employed, and the products were sold principally at the store of the Pitkins in Hartford, which for many years was located near Exchange Corner. The manufacture of silverware was continued in this building until it was destroyed by fire, February 2, 1880.

The accompanying illustration issued by the Jewellers Journal, giving the earliest watch makers in Europe and America, give Hele as the first European maker, and Pitkin as the first American manufacturer of watches. See their respective names at the head of the column; also see on the illustration a Pitkin watch of 1834, which has been added to the cut; several of these watches are still in use.

SUPPRESSION OF THE EARLY MANUFACTURES IN THE CONNECTICUT COLONY BY THE BRITISH PARLIAMENT.

Connecticut's early manufactures were a source of great anxiety to the manufacturers of Great Britain. Complaints were continually made to the British Parliament that a large trade and manufacture was carried on in New England, prejudicial to the trade and manufacture of Great Britain. In 1732, the London Company of Hatters caused an act to be passed preventing the exporting of hats out from any of His Majesty's Colonies in America.

In 1750, the continuance of the iron and steel works in the colonies was prohibited. An act prohibited the continuance of "any mill or engine, for slitting or rolling iron, or any plating forge, to work with a tilt hammer; or any furnace for making steel, in the colonies, under a penalty of two hundred pounds." This act, as was fully intended, greatly crippled the young colonies.

From the Peace of 1783 until the present Constitution, the power to counteract the restrictions of foreign nations unfavorable to American manufactures as well as commerce, was withheld from Congress under the confederation, and the want of unanimity and co-operation prevented its being done by the States themselves.

One of the objects which claimed the attention of the first Congress, under the new form of government ratified in 1789, was the encouragement and protection of the manufacturing as well as the commercial industries of the colonies. (See Secretary Hamilton's Report to the House of Representatives, January, 1791, Pitkin's United States Statistics, page 461.)

In 1815-16, the influx of foreign goods glutted the market and destroyed the hopes of American manufacturers. The latter effect was viewed by British statesmen with no little satisfaction, and was deemed an ample compensation for any losses sustained by the English manufacturers.

Brougham, referring to the losses sustained by the latter, declared in Parliament "that it was well worth while to incur loss upon the first exportation, in order, by the glut, to stifle in the cradle those rising manufactures in the United States."

American statesmen now saw the necessity as well as justice of affording some protection to American manufactures, and the Tariff Act of 1816 was made with special reference to this object, particularly as to woollens and cottons.

Reader, have I drawn too heavily on your time and patience in matters of school, church, town, military affairs, and manufacturing interests, for a genealogical record? If so, remember it is because the name of Pitkin is more largely identified in these affairs than any other name in the early history of Connecticut, and a mere record of births, marriages, and deaths, without these facts, would do injustice to the family name.

MARTHA (PITKIN) WOLCOTT.

Martha Pitkin, sister of Mr. William Pitkin, the progenitor of the Pitkins in America, and of Roger Pitkin of London, was born in England in 1638. She followed her brother to America in 1661, to return with him to England, "not once supposing he intended to remain in the wilderness," as she expressed it. Her first greeting on meeting her brother, whom she found feeding his swine, was, "I left a brother in England serving his king, and find another in America serving his swine." She was a lady endowed with more than ordinary talent, improved by an excellent education. The reception she met with in the colony, was most flattering; her comely form and accomplished manner making the colonists anxious to retain her in their country. In the words of the Rev. Thomas Robbins, for many years the pastor of the church she attended, "this girl put the colony in commotion. If possible she must be detained. The stock was too valuable to be parted with. It became a matter of general consultation what young man was good enough for Miss Pitkin." Tradition says that so many young men wished to marry the accomplished beauty, that they cast lots for her hand, but fails to say what part Miss Pitkin was to take in the affair. The facts are, that the sons of Henry Wolcott, one of the first settlers of East Windsor, were well pleased with Miss Pitkin, and to avoid all question of strife or jealousy, it is believed it was decided by lot among themselves which one should sue for her hand. The lot fell to Simon Wolcott, the youngest son; at all events, he pressed his suit, and was successful. Her brother favored the match, and she became the wife of Simon Wolcott, and subsequently the mother of Governor Roger Wolcott, grandmother of Governor Oliver Wolcott, and great-grandmother of the second Governor Oliver Wolcott and of Governor Roger Griswold. Governor Ellsworth was also a lineal descendant. Her granddaughter married Governor Matthew Griswold.

It was stated in the funeral sermon of Governor Roger Wolcott, her ninth child, "that he never went to school, but was educated by his mother in her own dwelling."

SIMON WOLCOTT, was b. 1625, m. Oct. 17, 1661, d. Apr. 29, 1687.

After the death of her husband Martha Wolcott became, in 1693, the second wife of Mr. Daniel Clark, one of the first settlers of Windsor. He was the secretary of the colony before the charter, and was one of the magistrates named in that instrument. A man of influence in the colony, an assistant from 1662 to 1664, he was appointed by the town of Windsor to sit "in the great pew which was wainscoted for the magistrate. He died Aug. 12, 1710, aged 88.

In the will of William Pitkin she is mentioned as "his sister Clark." She is buried in East Windsor, Conn., the resting place of several of her children. For a more complete history of her descendants, see the "Wolcott Memorial."

PITKINS OF THE BENCH AND BAR.

In 1662 was established a king's attorney for the Connecticut Colony.

William Pitkin, 1st, was appointed its first attorney, receiving the appointment of Attorney-General to the King. In 1664 he was appointed Attorney for the General Court, and in 1665 he was appointed Judge of the Court of the Assistants, and so remained during his life.

William Pitkin, 2d, was Judge of the County Court and Court of Assistants from 1702 till it was abandoned in 1711, upon the establishment of the Superior Court. In 1711 he was appointed Judge of that court and its Chief Judge in 1713.

Ozias Pitkin was Judge of the County Court from 1725 to 1735, when he was made Chief Judge of the Superior Court.

William Pitkin, 3d, was Judge of the County Court from 1735 to 1741, Judge of the Superior Court in 1741, and Chief Judge in 1754.

William Pitkin, 4th, was Judge of the Superior Court nineteen years, and upon the establishment of the Supreme Court, in 1784, he was appointed Judge of that court, and Chief Justice in 1789. It will be seen that four successive generations of William Pitkins filled most important judicial positions in the colony covering most of the time for a period of one hundred and twenty-five years.

Col. Joseph Pitkin was Judge of the County Court in 1735.

Thomas Pitkin was Magistrate and Justice in 1751.

Col. George Pitkin was Clerk of the Superior Court for forty-two years, from 1756 till 1798.

GENEALOGY.

PITKIN GENEALOGY.

ARRANGEMENT OF GENEALOGY.

The following genealogical arrangement by Mr. O. C. Pitkin recommends itself for its simplicity and facility in tracing all relationship.

In the male line the name occurs three times, as child, father, and grand-father; in the female line, twice, as child and mother. Each page shows three generations, GRANDPARENT, PARENT, CHILD. In tracing relationship, turn to the page designated by the index. The first column of figures in the index, designates the page on which the name occurs as a child; the second column, the page on which the name occurs as parent or married. If of Pitkin blood, the name occurs on page designated, in SMALL type under children with brothers and sisters. Over these children's names, occurs in LARGER type the name of the Pitkin parent, whether mother or father, and to whom married. At the top of the page, in still LARGER type will be found the name of the grandfather, and to whom married. The figures at the right of the grandfather's name denotes the page — turning back — on which these names occur as parent (with their children in small type); the figures at the left of the children's names in the margin denotes the page — turning forward — on which the children are recorded as parents. When no figures occur at the left hand in the margin, they did not marry; or, if not by the name of Pitkin, they are not continued.

Persons other than descendants of Pitkins, will be found on the pages designated, arranged to show their connection with the family.

"Nothing seems at first sight less interesting or less instructive than a genealogical table,—a mere register of names and dates. But each of these names is the memorial of an individual human life, that had its joys and sorrows, its cares and burdens, its affections and hopes, its conflicts and achievements, its opportunities wasted or improved, and its hour of death. Each of the dates of "Births," "Marriages," "Deaths," oh, how significant! What a day was each of these to some human family, or to some circle of loving human hearts."

MR. WILLIAM PITKIN.

WILLIAM PITKIN, the progenitor of the family in America, who came from England in 1659, was possessed of great ability and tenacity of purpose. Endowed with a discerning mind, coupled with an excellent English education, coming into the Colony after its early settlement, he soon gained the full confidence of the Connecticut colonists. He was admitted a freeman, October 9, 1662, and was appointed the same year by the General Assembly, Prosecutor for the Colony. His marked ability gave him, in 1664, the appointment of Attorney-General, by the King. From 1675 to 1690, a period of fifteen years, he annually represented Hartford in the Colonial Assembly. In 1676 he was chosen Treasurer of the Colony. He was often appointed Commissioner by the Colony to the United Colonies. In 1676 he was appointed with Major Talcott to negotiate peace with the Narragansett and other Indian tribes. In 1690 he was elected a member of the Colonial Council, and so remained till his death. In 1693 he was sent by the Colony to Governor Fletcher of New York, to negotiate terms respecting the militia until Governor Winthrop's return from England, whither he had gone on the same business (see Hollister's "Connecticut," p. 340). In 1693 "Mr. William Pitkin, Mr. Samuel Chester, and Captain William Whiting were appointed by the General Court to run the division line between the Connecticut and Massachusetts colonies" (see Trumbull's History, p. 410; also see Col. Rec., Vol. I, p. 363-413, Vol. II, p. 426, Vol. III, p. 19). Aside from his profession, he was also one of the principal planters of the town, having purchased a large tract of land on the east side of the river, on which his sons all settled. It embraced a portion of East Hartford Center (see map Part I). He owned one-third interest in a saw-mill and a grist-mill at "Pitkin Falls," so called from the number of dams and mills erected there, by the Pitkin family. He was also appointed with Mr. John Crow, to lay out the first Main and other streets on the east side of the river.

WILLIAM AND HANNAH (GOODWIN). p. 2.

Although a member of the Church of England, he asked for the rights of baptism for his children in the Puritan Church of the Colony, and they were so baptized. The church records attest that they all "owned their covenant" with and became members of the "First Church of Christ in Hartford." He left a large manuscript volume of religious writings, still extant, which show him to have been a man of piety and of no mean knowledge in theology also.

His character, as manifested throughout his life, and as revealed in the volume of his remarkable religious compositions, show that the part he took in the Church controversy (see Part I, Chap. VIII) was one in which he was sincere and moved by honorable convictions (see "History First Church of Hartford," Dr. G. L. Walker; also Stiles' "Ancient Windsor," p. 167). "After having filled various and important offices, distinguished for his virtues and ability, he died in 1694" (see Barber's "Connecticut," p. 75). He lies buried in the burial ground adjoining the "First Church of Hartford," Main street.

Capt. Roger Pitkin, eldest child of William and Hannah Pitkin, was a farmer. He built and settled near his father on the first Main street, on a portion of his father's large tract of land. He was early recognized as one of the leading citizens. He was one of the selectmen of the town for several years, and its first school committee-man, 1720. He was commissioner on the "Great Meadows." He was appointed by the General Assembly, captain of the first militia company on the east side of the river, the then (1698) Third Company State Militia (Col. Rec., p. 271, 392. He was actively engaged with his command in defense of the town against the Indians in 1704, and in other troubled times. He "owned his covenant" with the "First Church of Hartford" Nov. 22, 1685, and his oldest child, Hannah, was baptized that day. Roger and his wife and his brother William and wife were received into "full communion" Aug. 14, 1692, in the "First Church of Christ in Hartford."

He was distinguished both in public and private life. He acquired from his father a thorough knowledge of business and public affairs, particularly of the laws and policy of the Colony. This, with his natural courtesy and ease of manner, soon brought him prominently before the public. He was chosen Town Collector in 1715. He represented Hartford in the Colonial Assembly from 1728 to 1734. He was appointed Captain of the "train band" in 1730, and rose to Colonel in 1739. He was elected Speaker of the House in 1732, and was elected to the Council in 1734. He was Judge of the County Court from 1735 to 1752. He was appointed Judge of the Superior Court in 1741. He was Chief Justice of the Supreme Court twelve (12) years, and Lieutenant-Governor from 1754 to 1766, a period of twelve (12) years. He was a strong advocate of Colonial rights, and the first in the Colony to resist the "Stamp Act," which was passed in 1765, when Fitch was Governor and Pitkin, Lieutenant-Governor. When Governor Fitch and others of his council, who thought it their duty, were taking the oath to support the "Stamp Act," Lieutenant-Governor Pitkin, with Trumbull and others of the council, remonstrated, and left the council chamber while the oath was taken by Governor Fitch and his supporters. At the next election, May, 1766, when both Fitch and Pitkin were candidates for Governor, Pitkin was elected Governor by a majority "so great," says the Connecticut Gazette of the day, "that the votes were not counted." The first instance of the kind on record, I believe. Jonathan Trumbull was elected Lieutenant-Governor under Pitkin, who was Governor three and a half years, and died in office. The great popularity of Governor Pitkin, and his policy in resisting the "Stamp Act," and his sudden removal by death while in office, probably gave to his deputy, Trumbull, the Governorship at the following election.

WILLIAM AND ELIZABETH (STANLEY). p. 4.

Gov. Pitkin took a leading part in the first movement made towards the formation of this government and nation. At the first meeting of the Colonies to form a plan of union, in 1754, Lieut.-Gov. Pitkin and five others, with Benjamin Franklin as chairman, were chosen a committee, by the Colonies, to meet at Albany, N. Y., and prepare a Constitution. The plan then presented was the germ of the Articles of Confederation, re-arranged by Franklin in 1775, and adopted in 1777; under which the Colonies lived till the adoption of the Federal Constitution.

Governor Pitkin was of commanding appearance, highly affable and pleasing in manner. His urbanity and courtesy were long remembered by those who enjoyed his acquaintance. "A Satire on the Governors of Connecticut" (see Part I, Chap. IX), published in 1769, mentions him as "bowing and scraping, and continual hand-shaking." "Graces," says Goodwin, "that certainly could be tolerated in one who scattered away evil with his eye." The inscription on his monument, written by the good Dr. Williams, is as follows:

"Here lieth Interred the body of the Honorable William Pitkin, Esq., late Governor of the Colony of Connecticut. To the God of Nature indebted for all his Talents, he aimed to employ them in Religion, without Affectation, Cheerfull, Humble, and Temperate, Zealous and bold for the Truth, Faithfull in Distributing Justice, Scattering away Evil with his Eye, an Example of Christian Virtue, a Patron of his Country, a Benefactor to the poor, a Tender Parent and Faithful Friend. Twelve years he presided in the Superior Court, and three years and a half Governor-in-Chief. After serving his Generation by the Will of God with Calmness and serenity fell on sleep, the 1st day of October, A. D., 1769, in the 76th year of his Age.

"Walk thoughtful on that solemn shore,
Of that vast ocean thou art soon to pass."

He was "musterer" of the company raised for the expedition against Crown Point, commanded by his brother Col. John Pitkin. (See Col. Rec., Vol. VII, pp. 339, 395, 517, 541, 543.) He was deacon of the Third Church of Hartford from 1748 till his death, fourteen (14) years. He owned, with his brother, Gov. William, two large fulling mills at "Pitkin Falls." He built, in 1747, a rolling and iron slitting mill at the "Forge Falls." This industry was prohibited by British Parliament in 1750. Powder was manufactured here for the army during the Revolution. At its close, it was again run as an iron mill. He built in 1723, lived and died, in a house now standing, since known as the "Stuart House," near which he had a building for clothings.

He was b. 1724. d. Dec. 12, 1789.
She “ “ Feb. 11, 1728. d. Dec. 28, 1807.

Col. William Pitkin was appointed, in 1758, Major of the Connecticut forces raised for the expedition against Canada. He served through the campaign under Gen. Abercrombie, and acquired the reputation of a faithful and gallant officer. He was appointed Colonel in 1762; was a member of the Council from 1766 to 1785, embracing the period of the Revolution, and for the greater part of the war he served as a member of the Council of Safety (Barber's "Connecticut"). He was Judge of the Supreme Court for nineteen (19) years; was elected to the Congress of the United States in 1784. He was delegate to the convention for the ratification of the Constitution of the United States in 1788.

In 1775, William Pitkin and others of the Pitkin family commenced the manufacture of gunpowder for the Revolutionary War, in the same mills, owned by his father and uncle, where the iron industries had been prohibited by the British Parliament twenty-five years before. This was the first powder-mill in the State, if not in the country, being previous to that of Paul Revere's, near Boston, Mass.

William Pitkin took an active part in some of the most important events in the history of our country. (See also Col. Rec., Vol. VII, pp. 345, 351, 403, 420, 424, 509.) He was deacon of the Third Church of Hartford from 1760 till his death, 1789, a period of twenty nine (29) years.

Timothy Pitkin grad. at Yale 1747; a tutor at Yale from 1750 to 1751; from 1777 to 1804 a Fellow of the Yale College Corporation; was one of the beneficiaries of Yale to the amount of one hundred and fifty pounds (£150). He studied theology and was installed pastor, in 1752, of the Congregational Church, Farmington, Conn. Bacon, in his "Ecclesiastical History," mentions him as one of the "half century ministers" of New England. He was one of the Trustees of Yale College for many years, and when Dartmouth (N. H.) was instituted he was chosen one of the Board of Trustees for it. At the one hundredth anniversary of the Church in Farmington, Conn., Rev. Noah Porter, D.D., said of Rev. Mr. Pitkin, while he continued pastor of the church, and long afterward, that he "walked with dignity up the center aisle, in flowing cloak and venerable wig, with his three-cornered hat in hand, bowing to the people on either side." In his funeral sermon, preached by the Rev. Dr. Perkins, among other things he said of him is the following: "Mr. Pitkin needed to have a 'Thus saith the Lord' for all he admitted as articles of faith and duties to be performed. He received no doctrines from mere tradition, or because the Christian Fathers or illustrious names in annals of the Church had received it. Plain Scripture only determined his mind." The "Half way Covenant" was abandoned by Mr. Pitkin in the Farmington Church, but with much difficulty. (See Bacon's "Ecclesiastical History," p. 387.)

Col. George Pitkin was Clerk of the Superior and Supreme Courts for many years. Many old documents are now extant with the well-authenticated signature of "G. Pitkin, Clerk." He was commissioned Captain in 1768; Lieutenant-Colonel 1774; Colonel 1775. He, with his regiment of minute-men, immediately marched to the relief of Boston on receipt of the news of the struggle at Concord and Lexington. The well-known family names on his muster-roll show an earnest response to the call for help in the early struggle of our country.

He grad. at Yale in 1753; was chosen Captain in 1775, and Major-Commandant of the Artillery Company, East side, in 1792. (See Matross Company, Chap. XI.) He was, in 1770, appointed on a committee for the prevention of the importation of English goods into the Colony. He was largely identified with the manufacturing interests of Hartford, he having been one of the principal owners in the manufactories of powder, glass, and snuff; also having erected, in 1770, one of the earliest wool-carding mills in the country. He also carried on the "Forge," for the manufacture of anchors and other iron work. He was also an enterprising merchant in the West India trade. His house and store are still standing (see Part I, Chap. X). Count de Rochambeau was his guest during his encampment here in 1781. He was noted for his hospitality to the clergy of whatever denomination, and his house soon gained the title of the "Ministers' Hotel." He was Moderator at the town meetings for many years; a magistrate and old-time justice. He was representative to the General Assembly from East Hartford from its incorporation in 1784 to 1805, a period of twenty-one (21) years.

Rev. Nathan Perkins, D.D. (son of Matthew and Hannah Perkins, Norwich, Conn.) graduated at Princeton in 1770; studied Divinity under Dr. Lord of Norwich; ordained in West Hartford Oct. 15, 1772. Here he continued to labor with great diligence and fidelity during the long period of sixty-six years. He married Catherine Pitkin, daughter of Rev. Timothy Pitkin of Farmington, who was spared to him a period of sixty-three years. In memory of the late Dr. Nathan Perkins and Catherine Pitkin, his wife, a memorial window of richly stained glass, bearing the design of St. John the Divine receiving the revelation, "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord," was presented June, 1882, to the Church of West Hartford, by their descendants, the Seymour and Day families of Hartford, and many others, living widely scattered through the country.

†Thos. C. Perkins, who married a sister of Rev. Henry Ward Beecher, had few superiors at the bar. Says Judge Shipman, "He possessed an intellect of great native acuteness and vigor. His perceptions were quick, and his mind seized with readiness and wielded with strength the material which his case and the law afforded. Both as a counselor and an advocate, this bar has long conceded his ability."

He has served as State and United States Attorney for several years; was also a member of the General Assembly.

‡Henry A. Perkins began his banking career as clerk in Phoenix Bank, Hartford, Conn.; was cashier of the Litchfield Bank in 1827; cashier of the Mechanics Bank of New Haven, in 1829, but was called as cashier of the Hartford Bank the same year, and so remained for twenty-four years, till 1853, when he was elected president, which office he filled with great ability and integrity till his death, a period of twenty years; having raised, during the period of forty-four years, the bank from almost financial ruin to as high a standard as any bank in the country. Of his generosity it is said, "No worthy object ever appealed to him in vain." He shrank from public office or any notoriety whatever.

Timothy Pitkin was the grandson of President Clap of Yale College. He prepared for Yale under his father and brother-in-law, Rev. Nathan Perkins, D.D. He entered in 1781, and graduated in 1785, with the highest honors of his class. He was a most excellent scholar in the classics and the sciences, especially Mathematics, Natural Philosophy, and Astronomy. During his college course he calculated and projected all the eclipses for each year to 1800. Among these, was the famous annular eclipse of the sun in 1790. He decided at an early age upon the profession of the Law, and, after studying under Oliver Wolcott, Esq., he was admitted to the Bar of Hartford County in 1788. He was subsequently made a Doctor of Laws, LL.D. In 1790, at the age of twenty-four (24), he was chosen Representative from Farmington to the General Assembly, and continued, with few intermissions, to represent his native town till 1805. During this period he was several times Speaker of the House. In 1805 he was elected Representative to Congress, and continually returned in that capacity till 1819. He was in Washington four years under Jefferson's administration, eight years under Madison's, and ten years under Monroe's. During the years 1816-1817 Mr. Pitkin published the first and second editions of the "Commercial Statistics of the United States." Of the second edition two hundred and fifty (250) copies were taken by Congress for the use of the Government. After leaving Congress, he was engaged in preparing a "Political and Civil History of the United States," from 1763 to 1797, or to the close of Washington's Administration. This history was published in two volumes in 1828.* In 1835 he published a third and enlarged edition of his "Statistics," including some accounts of the banks and manufactures of the country.

* This history contains a vast amount of interesting information, even to the student of to-day. It is becoming rare and valuable.

THE HON. TIMOTHY PITKIN, LL.D.

TIMOTHY AND TEMPERANCE (CLAP). p. 27.

From the time of Mr. Pitkin's leaving Congress he was annually chosen to the Connecticut Legislature from Farmington, Conn., until 1830, when he was elected Senator.

He was a member of the Convention which framed the new Constitution of the State of Connecticut. In 1837, at a meeting of the "Société Française de Statistique Universelle," held at the "Hôtel de Ville" in Paris, Mr. Pitkin was awarded a medal of honor with a letter from the President, Le Duc de Montmorenci, acknowledging his valuable contribution to statistical science. He soon after received from Le Comte de Bussy, the Secretary, a diploma making him a complimentary member of the same. On the 25th of May, 1847, he was elected an honorary member of the "New England Historical and Genealogical Society," from which records some of these extracts are taken. Not long before his death he wrote as follows: "For several years past I have spent no inconsiderable portion of my time in the study of the Bible; . . . the more am I convinced that it can be none other than the word of God, and that it is the only sure guide to happiness, both here and hereafter."

Nothing seemed to disturb the balance of her mind. Generous in her disposition and education, she was a pattern of kindness, patience, and unaffected dignity. Her tall and stately figure, her calm, honest, discerning, Roman face, and the easy nobility of her mien and carriage, would have given grace and dignity to a throne."

He graduated at Yale 1779. He was commissioned Captain in 1796, and rose to Major-Commandant in 1798. He was Representative to the Legislature thirteen (13) years. He was Town Clerk of East Hartford from 1801, for thirty-five (35) consecutive years. He was also Treasurer of the town for the same number of years. He early saw the usefulness of Sabbath-school institutions, and in 1819 established the Sabbath-school, and became its first Superintendent.

He was chosen Deacon of the Third Church of Hartford in 1813, and so remained for twenty-six (26) years, until his death. He was one of the first corporators of the Theological Institute of Connecticut, 1830. By the unanimous choice of the Pastoral Union he continued a member of the Board of Trustees from 1834 until his death, 1839.

Major Samuel Pitkin built, owned, and run the first cotton-mill ever operated in Connecticut, and the first, save one, in this country. He was also largely engaged in the manufacture of gunpowder (see "Early Manufactures," Part I, Chap. XII).

Dr. Edward Pitkin graduated in 17—, and practiced medicine in East Hartford very successfully for many years. In 1823 a patent was granted him for "improvement in fencing."

A good story is told in connection with a new carriage, on which he had painted the Pitkin Coat of Arms, by referring to which will be seen two swans. A neighbor having accosted him with, "Ah! Doctor, I see you have your sign on your carriage." "Sign! sir, what do you mean?" "Why, quack, quack, quack," was the reply, and he disappeared down the street, as well he might, to escape the consequences.

Joseph Pitkin was commissioned Captain in 1806; Major-Commandant in 1809. He was Representative in 1819. He commenced the manufacture of hats about 1800, and in 1807 was granted to him the first patent ever granted in this country on felt hats. The same patent covered a claim and grant to make cloth without yarn or warp (felt cloth). This was also the first patent ever granted on felts. This industry was carried on in a building on East Hartford street, just north of the Hockanum bridge, and the hatting business was continued there till within the present generation.

Richard Pitkin, although but sixteen years of age, served in the Revolution; too young to be accepted as a soldier, he drove an ammunition wagon in that war. He was Representative to the Connecticut Legislature in 1793. He was for many years a cotton manufacturer, having succeeded his father in business. He was also interested in the Glass Works (Part I, Chap. XII), and later was identified with shipping and the West India trade.

WORLD'S EXPOSITION.

JAN. 29, 1885.

Reception of the Liberty Bell from the City of Philadelphia by the City of New Orleans.

ELOQUENT SPEECH OF HON. J. R. G. PITKIN OF NEW ORLEANS.

Mr. E. K. Converse, as Chairman of the meeting, called the audience to attention and introduced the orator of the day, Mr. Pitkin of New Orleans, who had been chosen to represent the city authorities of New Orleans in the reception of the bell.

Following is the speech of

J. R. G. PITKIN.*

This solemn memorial, whose mighty lips proclaimed the nativity of an empire, burdens me with a devout sense which must labor for expression. If ever the past can impose its hands upon the shoulders of men and bear them down to their very knees, it should be in the presence of this herald of American independence, whose clapper was the iron fist of a resolute Congress, and in the shout, tremor, and moan of whose voice were announced the determination and solicitude of that awful juncture. Those sober tones were the great declaration set to a rhythm to which patriots marched, bullets sang, and cannon gave their hoarse throats, till at last it melted upon the air and into the tranquil pulses of a free and independent people, rich in their graves and in the reclaimed birthright of their manhood.

"I am well aware," said John Adams, "of the toil and blood and treasure that it will cost us to maintain this declaration and support and defend these States. Yet, through all this gloom, I can see the rays of ravishing light and glory. I can see that the end is more than worth all the means, and that our posterity will triumph in that day's transaction, even although we should rue it."

And in the triumph of that posterity we do stand with bared heads to-day before what it is no extravagance to declare is a vast helmet to whose dimensions the stature and brow of a Republic have grown before the world; nay, that broad-shouldered Republic has moved under it with conscious heart from Philadelphia, where sat that old Continental Congress, to New Orleans and to this new Congress of Labor.

Birds often inhabit cannon and statues, and make them voluble with their gentle voices. I would not detract from the claims of the winged national songs that nested in the inspiration of this bell, and that fly and pipe world-wide wherever our national standard floats, nor would I discredit our thrushes and wrens of patriotic verse that far outnumber our metrical nightingales, but I believe that a grander expression, a noble American anthem, a very Eagle of Song, keen of beak and bolder of pinion and note, will yet fly forth from this grim bell with a sudden buffet of the startled air, to cleave alike the storm and sunshine of our history, and compel us to move with brows still more erect, and hearts yet more elate ! In other words, that there slumbers a massive brain beneath this old helmet, whence a new and marvelous oracle shall yet come to us.

To Amphion's lute stones danced into walls and houses, and our later and grander Thebes is the product of the rude metres that burst one hundred and nine years ago from this maw of metal in billows of sound that upheaved our soil to earthworks and sacred mounds, and our colonies to a symmetrical and enduring Nation !

"After speech," said Lacordaire, "silence is the greatest power in the world." Its voice has departed, but its silence is no less an eloquence that should search and quicken every heart in which stirs a pulse for enlightened liberty. It still announces, though dumb, the glory of our fathers, who leaped from their weary knees as subjects, looked stern men straight up across the shoulders of a George to God himself as their only King, plucked aside a throne as an impediment to that larger fealty and sent their demands through gun-barrels till England confesses them under pen and seal.

This messenger from the past admonishes us, then, that in the due self-assertion of man and in the sincere touch of elbow with his fellow lie the conditions of all genuine prosperity and civilization — and that the lower clouds darken upon him, the nearer God bends to await the seasoning by trial of the moral sinews that are to achieve, maintain, and transmit a great trust.

Once before, and once as a recast since the Declaration, this bell was cracked. It may be said to have typified in its first fissure the imperfect confederation which was moulded anew to our present system, and to suggest a forecast whether time shall reveal the brittleness of the latter as well. We look to the makers who mould the metal of a bell, and in our continuous experiment of government we must remember that a due admixture of powers in a political system, or an excess of no ingredient that may menace its wholeness and impair its full harmony is the especial consideration that challenges our jealous care. I recall an older Philadelphia of Lydia, distinguished for its Christianity and valor in defense, but long since crumbled to ruins, and another of Cilicia, and yet another Philadelphia of Decapolis, which are now but wild waste and silence. I foresee hazards yet to come to us; fevers and congestions in our national life, revolts of labor, the despotism of capital, the uncharitableness of sect, the abuse of liberty in license. The same rich inherent forces may bless or mar just as a bell may reel to-day a marriage cup full of gladness, and on the morrow be an urn brimmed with funeral moan. Heaven grant that danger, come whence it may, may be averted, but the strenuous honest hands we uplift to that prayer have in themselves three-fourths of its answer.

As in the making of a bell we dig down into the earth, shape its matrix, and pour fervent metal, red like blood, sparkling with stars and murmurous as with molten thunder, so in framing a body politic our fathers went grave-deep, poured forth the crimson tide of life, and, as the system resolved itself to form, saw its stars leap and mast and spire burst like mighty stems with the consummate flower of a national banner. Their system gave to the world what the bell-maker would call the distinct consonant note which signifies the cast to be "true"; and upon no fitter occasion in our lives can we renew our vows to that system than here before this souvenir of the past that shouted a "halt" to British aggression and a "march" to men, no longer subjects, which should give impetus as well to our civic progress to-day and forever till the last moon shall be quenched. That liberty whose price is eternal vigilance, it proclaimed as its scriptural legend reads, "Throughout all the land unto all the inhabitants thereof." It rang out a curfew into an ashen British sunset, and sent its voice on and on through seven long years of night, to bellow in a grand American dawn.

New Orleans need tender to-day no hospitality as to a stranger, though I am charged by His Honor, her Mayor, and her leading citizens to convey a welcome. This bell comes to its own upon any and every acre of American soil, and our best tribute and welcome are in the evidences presented in these vast halls, in the manifold tokens of the prowess of the American heart, brain, and hand. Wherever it moves, whether to the Gulf or to the far Pacific, it finds an expanded Philadelphia—one vast national tract dominated by Brotherly Love. The will that nerved the arm to strike in '76 can be fitly hallowed only in our covenant and stout endeavor to maintain the freedom, growth, and elbow-room it demanded for us and for the thought that should leap through our fingers in the activities and ameliorations of life. In these prodigal results about us here to-day we proffer a moral and intellectual welcome, not as New Orleans men, nor as Louisianians alone, but as national brethren who best honor the past and themselves by conserving their heritage and adapting it to uses that best ennoble man.

The same bold dextrous hand of Jefferson that drafted the Declaration of Independence, compassed later with equal prescience the purchase from France of the territory of which this commonwealth is a part, and which extends the Mississippi seaward as its vast arm, and the Mexican Gulf as its buckler to suffice the remotest motive that lodged in that momentous instrument. The Empire that this bell invoked now murmurs in the stately tides that sweep before us, and upon which LaSalle descended nearly a century before the Declaration: and bell and stream are each charged with so vital and mighty a personality that here, as it were, grandsire and robust grandson have met in the precious companionship of example and filial achievement. In the name of the authorities and exchanges of this city, I confidently announce that there never before came to her aught to which she so reverently unhinged her gates and so proudly gave greeting in the pulsation of her hearts and steeples and with the full lungs of her artillery.

Here, at New Orleans, where the three Americas, the North, the Central, and the South, have met at this Carthage of their Mediterranean to announce their kinship in a continental policy; where labor asserts its royalty and has buried, let us hope, its feuds and rheums as deep as Prospero drowned his book; here, whither Jackson rides up in bronze a calm Revere from the last British fight at Chalmette; here, where this old Bell's peremptory clang down the century swells in reverberation from scores of Southern industrial clamors that bawl a Briarean sense of arm and brain at last; here, where diversified labor intrenched in a coalition of sun, soil, iron, coal, forests, harbors and streams, dares new tasks, clenches levers and hoes and not spleens, sweats in steam, and is all knuckle for enterprise, and all palm for brotherhood; here, where a little child's arms unwittingly betray to the bell the old passion which smolders in the grandsire; here, where Lee awaits with folded arms the advance of the old swords in ploughshares, the sapper in the mine, the sortie by rail, and the conquest of the fields by swelling armies of husbandmen; here, girt by the triumphs of American labor-masters in the great battle of national development, this relic of the Revolution is in the securest of sanctuaries! I beg you so to testify, gentlemen of Philadelphia, who are about to return to your distant city. A word in conclusion.

Far up into the same skies — for civilization has no horizon — that bend over the old historic bells of England, Holland, Germany, Italy, and France, not one has lifted a voice so bold as a mandate and so rich in prophecy as this — and may all the cannon of the world yet mount her towers as mellow bells to utter each to the other that generous testimony of worship and fellowship, “Glory to God in the highest; on earth peace, and good will to men.”

Rev. Caleb Pitkin graduated at Yale in 1806; studied theology with Rev. Asahel Hooker, Goshen, Conn.; was ordained and installed pastor of the Second Congregational Church of Milford, Conn., March 6, 1808; resigned October, 1816. He removed to New Connecticut, Ohio, in 1817, as Missionary, and during twenty-eight (28) weeks of his first year there he delivered one hundred and forty-seven (147) sermons (Missionary Herald, 1818). He was installed pastor of the First Congregational Church in Charlestown, Ohio, in April, 1817. He was one of the founders and early supporters of the Western Reserve College, and for many years one of its trustees, and settled at Hudson in 1828 to assist in building up this college. To the Rev. Caleb Pitkin the entire Pitkin family should be indebted for having prepared a manuscript record of the first generations; without which this record, or at least so complete an one, would have been impossible. By himself and his descendants the ministry of the Gospel has been well represented in the West.

John R. Pitkin commenced his business career in early life, in connection with Messrs. S. & L. Hurlburt, Winchester, Conn., in a mercantile enterprise in Augusta, Ga. This, with other business connections in the South continued till 1832, when he returned to New York and engaged in the dry-goods trade.

Mr. Pitkin early saw the advantageous situation of some of the Long Island properties contingent to New York. His foresight, together with his indomitable will and energy projected, planned, and founded the city of East New York, and Wood Haven, L. I. He lived to see their growth and prosperity assured. One of Mr. Pitkin's fondest hopes was to see the union of education and labor, especially among the vagrant and poorer classes in New York and other large cities. He early argued that classified labor must be the competing element in many trades. He lived to see it exemplified, more especially in the boot and shoe trade, with which he was familiar. He was a man of great worth and varied talents.

THEODORE AND ELIZABETH (PITKIN). p. 47.

He was one of the founders and the first Trustee of the Rochester Savings Bank, an office he held till his death. He was for many years President of the bank. At a meeting of the Trustees of the Rochester Savings Bank the following resolutions were adopted, May 5, 1869:

“Resolved, That in the history of our city, few of its citizens have made so marked an impression for integrity, public spirit, and the illustration of every Christian virtue. He was completely a gentleman, always kind and considerate, — an honest man, — fulfilling with scrupulous exactness every honorable obligation and duty.”

At a meeting of the Vestry of St. Luke's Church, May 6, 1869, the following resolutions were adopted:

“Resolved, That on the death of William Pitkin, who for nearly fifty years has been a member and communicant of this church, for six years a Vestryman thereof, and for thirty-nine years afterward one of its Wardens, said church has lost one of its most useful and esteemed members, one of its wisest counselors, and one of its highest ornaments.

“Resolved, That we deem it but the measure of justice to the memory, merits, and services of the deceased to express the opinion that a large degree of the success, harmony, and prosperity of this church for nearly half a century are eminently due to the wisdom, prudence, unceasing care and watchful regard of the deceased, for the best interests of said church and congregation.”

Mr. John O. Pitkin was one of the pioneers in the manufacture of solid silver ware, having commenced this industry in 1826, and continuing in it until 1840, when he was succeeded by his brother, Walter Pitkin, who had been a partner since 1830. He was for many years a jeweler in Hartford, Conn. He was also interested in many other manufacturing enterprises in later life in Manchester, Mansfield, and Coventry, Conn. He was one of the Prudential Committee of the First Church in Hartford, and one of six teachers who formed the first Sabbath-school connected with that church in 1840. Residence, Providence, R. I.

Mr. Walter Pitkin at an early age was associated with his brother, John O., in the manufacture of silver ware at East Hartford, and in the jewelry business in Hartford. He succeeded his brother in the former business about 1840, and in the latter some time afterward. He was Captain of the First Company Governor's Foot Guard, from 1828 to 1838. He retired from business many years before his death, and from about 1880, made his permanent residence at Washington, D. C. The Hartford Courant well described him as a "gentleman of the old school"; and, in a friendly tribute in the Washington Star, it is justly said: "His genial nature, his gentle and winning manners, his perfect uprightness of character, and singular purity of life, made up a personality of rare attractiveness."

Mr. Henry Pitkin began the manufacture of watches in 1834, at the factory in East Hartford, Conn. These were the first watches made in America. (See Chap. XII.) They were known as the "American Lever Watch," and were good watches for those days. Several of them are still in existence. The "Jeweller's Journal" justly places Mr. Pitkin's name at the head of all the watchmakers in America. (See cut, Chap. XII.) Mr. Pitkin removed his watch business to New York, and died there soon after.

Hon. J. R. G. Pitkin is a native of New Orleans, La. He was educated in New England; read law with Thomas C. Perkins of Hartford, Conn., p. 49; graduated at the Louisiana Law University in civil law (a code that obtains only in that State). He entered upon the practice of law in 1860. Soon after Gen. Butler entered New Orleans with his army, in 1862, Mr. Pitkin declared himself in a public speech for the Union, and in the late angry struggle in that State he has been one of the foremost Republican figures. He was U. S. Marshal of Louisiana in 1876, during the terrible struggle between the Hayes and Tilden elements. He resigned the marshalship in June, 1877, and was reappointed thereto in 1882, which position he continues to hold to the present time. He may justly take great pride in having been invited to deliver the opening address at the reception of the "Liberty Bell" from the city of Philadelphia by the city of New Orleans at the World's Exposition in 1885 (see p. 71); also to deliver an address on the celebration of the "Connecticut day," and of the "Georgia day." He also made the address of welcome on behalf of the city of New Orleans and her exchanges and the State of Louisiana to Convention on Improvements of the Western Water Ways, held at World's Exposition, April, 1885. Page 142. Mr. Pitkin has since received the appointment of Commissioner General of the Exposition of the three Americas, North, South, and Central, held at the World's Exposition grounds, New Orleans, La., 1886.

ADDRESS OF WELCOME,

On Behalf of the City of New Orleans and Her Exchanges, and the State of Louisiana,

By J. R. G. PITKIN,

To Convention Held at the World's Exposition, April 7 and 8, 1885.

New Orleans, the warder at this marine gate of the Valley Empire, proffers hearty welcome to her guests to-day, brethren in large part of the vast old province to which the brave LaSalle gave the name of Louisiana, and which, in these wonders about us, of its industrial discovery, and power, has descended its great river two centuries behind LaSalle to announce the results of the man mated to the acre and naturalized to American conditions and opportunities.

The moment of your mission entitles you to our sincerest hospitality, and it is but just alike to you and to those for whom I am charged to speak that such a tender should be emphasized in a frank assurance in respect of the Lower Valley. You have entered a new South. She has reclaimed her old lamp from the ruins of the past, rubbed with busy shirt-sleeve the rust from her old endeavor, and lo! a series of Aladdin's palaces rise from the sod, while the good genii of the soil, the mine, and the fire, now incarnate, in our fellow-men, bring hither largess that dwarfs the boldest fable of the Orient. The cotton-boll is something more than the pompon of an industrial army of occupation; it has expanded with a more marvelous necromancy than did Ahmed's pocket gift to these sixty acres of stored pavilion.

It is due to the century that this Exposition should have been erected in our Great Valley as an arch of triumph from beneath which Commerce may stride forth to new ventures. Commerce, that lifts her Tyre, Venice, and Holland from the sea and her Palmyra from the desert, scales Alps like a Hannibal, walks the waves an undaunted Peter, knits remote populations to one people by codes of mercantile and maritime law, implants mutual faith in fellow-men, discovers new sites for her Ninevahs, Babylons, Athens, Carthages and Corinthis, multiplies her couriers and marts, plucks all physical resources above, on or within the earth for her use and arouses the capacity of man freely to think, labor, and discover what he may produce for exchange and how attain higher conditions; this Commerce forever bears the rich oil of human endeavor to and fro among the enlightened nations of the earth that greet each other with the lofty torches of philosophy and religion! In its exchange of commodities goes the beneficent leaven of civilization, the best motive, talent, research, and result. Every new box that enters a foreign land is an envelope of a new intellectual germ; in every new mechanical appliance slumbers an auxiliary brain. [Cheers.]

RELATION OF TARIFF TO INTERNAL IMPROVEMENTS.

Permit me to say, too, that in making our rightful claim upon the public purse, we should not re-inforce our niggards in Congress in their hostility by encouraging tariff legislation that may diminish the contents of that purse. Our domestic labor should command the fair wages and profit which constitute price, by means both of protection within the work-shop and of a river path from it for the surplus. Our toll upon foreign labor should open our outlets for home labor. Here in the Lower Valley, where manufacturing projects have barely begun, any revenue tenet that is a nailed plank across the door of an American shop, reduces the surplus for export, arrests its egress to the sea, and helps the import in. We cannot long look for practical internal improvements, with our industrial candle burning at both ends.

NEGLECT OF THE MAIL-BAG.

Bonaparte, Mr. President, declared, upon our purchase of this province, "I have given to England a maritime rival that will sooner or later humble her pride," but while in respect of our shipping, a Congress is a mere annex of a British Parliament, English pride is safe, whatever commiseration our own may invite.

That only one-sixteenth of our foreign commerce should be in our vessels, and that an annual $150,000,000 in requital for service should go under other flags, is enough to deepen the blush that stripes our standard!

A man might almost as fitly commit his liver to another man's care as a great government its mail-bag to another nation's carriers, and England, Germany, and France have been astute enough to award large mail allowances to their steam lines. Their subsidies are the hinges upon which the South American commercial gates swing open. A mail-pouch is in peace much like what a shell is in war: it forces an opening in foreign frontiers and distributes itself in a disturbance of old conditions and in the sting of wholesome, continuous new conditions.

It is the missile of missiles with which a progressive nation may silently bombard itself into recognition elsewhere — and a nation that is not jealous of its mail-pouch, and tosses it for carriage under a foreign flag, pays a scant sum in money, and rank usury in prosperity, which the too willing foreign carrier "takes out in trade." Is it any marvel that sixty-eight per cent. of our ante-bellum commerce should still be out of our hands? We need a merchant marine — a sea militia always ready for adaptation in man and material to national crises — and the readiness is the best surety for immunity from war. [Loud applause.]

Mr. O. C. Pitkin graduated at Dartmouth College in 1847; Principal of the "People's Academy" at Morrisville, Vt., for two years; Principal of the High School, Taunton, Mass., five years (1849-1854); and Principal of the High School, Chelsea, Mass., sixteen years.

In the Board of School Committee, Chelsea, Mass.,

"Resolved. That the School Committee, in accepting the resignation of Mr. Pitkin, and in thus sundering relations, which have been alike pleasant to this Board and its predecessors, and profitable to all the successive classes of the High School, desire to place on permanent record, their full appreciation of his unflinching zeal, ability, and devotion, in the discharge of all the duties devolving upon his position. We gratefully record our convictions that his connection with the High School has been of inestimable benefit to the city, and that his departure will leave a void not easily filled."

He was of the late firm "Smith & Pitkin," now "O. C. Pitkin," manufacturing chemist, "Syracuse, N. Y."

Mr. Pitkin's services have been invaluable on this genealogy.

Dr. H. S. Pitkin graduated from the "Vermont University" in 1858; studied medicine and graduated from "Medical College" at Burlington, Vt., in 1860; entered the U. S. Navy as Surgeon in 1862. He served during the War of the Rebellion in both the "North and South Atlantic Squadrons," and received "honorable mention" in the attack on Fort Fisher. At the conclusion of the war he accompanied Assistant Secretary Fox on a mission to Russia, and served in both the Mediterranean and Asiatic Squadrons. He accompanied Prof. Agassiz on a scientific expedition around Cape Horn, on the Coast Survey steamer "Hessler," and "rendered that distinguished scientist great assistance." He joined the U. S. steamer "Benicia" as Surgeon in 1872, and died on board that steamer at Honolulu, Sandwich Islands. He was buried in the Nuuanu Cemetery, with honors. The funeral procession contained, beside the officers and crew of his ship, His Majesty the King of the Sandwich Islands, his staff, members of the royal family, and many citizens of Honolulu, to whom he had endeared himself by all those qualities that go to make up a gallant officer and genial gentleman.

A. P. Pitkin is the senior member of the Pitkin Bros. & Co. Iron Works. He was born and spent his early life on the homestead of the first William Pitkin, and from his grandfather Pitkin, whose memory carried him back nearly eighty years, many of the incidents connected with the early Pitkin family were obtained. This, with an additional accumulation of interesting facts during the past forty years, has greatly increased an early desire to see this information in print. It had never been his purpose to write up this book. He could not give it the necessary time during business hours; neither could he find a suitable person to attempt it with him after business hours. He was therefore obliged to do it personally. If living on the homestead of the first William Pitkin, our paternal ancestor, gave to the conception of the work any inspiration, having written it up, during the past quarter of a century, on the original homestead of Hannah Goodwin, our maternal ancestor, may we trust, have given additional interest to the work; at all events, the coincidence has been of interest to the writer.

He was b. Aug. 31, 1837. m. June 17, 1862.

Hon. F. W. Pitkin entered Wesleyan University, Middletown, Conn., in 1854; graduated with honors in 1858; entered Albany, N. Y., Law School, and graduated in 1860; read law in the office of Senator Harris, Albany, N. Y. He went to Milwaukee, Wis., where he soon stood at the head of his profession. He was of the well known law firm, "Palmer, Hooker & Pitkin." Failing health sent him to Europe, in 1873, and to Colorado in 1874. Three years in camp in the mining districts during the summer, and in the cities in the winter, he became well known and popular. His mining interests also identified him with the interests of the State, and when his name was presented as candidate for the gubernatorial chair, in 1878, there was no dissenting voice. He was elected Governor of Colorado by a very popular majority. He was also reëlected for a second term. Gov. Pitkin was further complimented by the incorporation of the town of "Pitkin," in 1879, in the vicinity of which are some thirty silver and other mines; the "Pitkin Bank," "Pitkin Hotel," "Pitkin Progress" (its paper), all of which testify to the popularity of Gov. Pitkin.

Extracts from his Inaugural Address will be found on page 231.

ADDRESS
HIS EXCELLENCY FREDERICK W. PITKIN,
To the Two Branches of the Legislature of Colorado,
JANUARY 14, 1879.

INAUGURAL ADDRESS.

Gentlemen of the Senate and House of Representatives :

I am unwilling to enter upon the discharge of the duties of office without first expressing to the people of the State my feeling of sincere gratitude for the confidence which they have reposed in me in selecting me as their chief magistrate.

Although the youngest State in the Union, Colorado is, with three exceptions, the largest in area. Its territory exceeds in extent the kingdom of Great Britain. Twenty years ago there was no organized community of civilized men within its limits. To-day it is covered with beautiful cities and flourishing towns which contain as many men and women of intelligence, education, and culture in proportion to the population as any of the older States.

On our plains, where twenty years ago nothing but the antelope and buffalo roamed, are to-day thousands of herds of cattle, horses, and sheep, bringing most profitable returns to their owners. Along the valleys agriculture is successfully pursued.

Scarcely ten years ago, and not a mile of railway had been constructed within our limits. To-day more than twelve hundred miles are in successful operation, over two hundred miles of which have been built within the past year. Several rival corporations are now pushing forward their iron lines with all possible haste to secure for transportation the wealth of the central, western, and southwestern sections of the State.

Where, a few years ago, long caravans were moving westward from the Missouri River to supply our settlements with the necessities of life, we find to-day an endless succession of railway trains carrying to the east our surplus product of cattle, flour, and grain.

MINING INTERESTS.

The most important facts in our history, however, relate to the present condition of the mining interests. We have become the third mineral producing State in the Union.* The ore which has given Colorado rank next to Nevada and California has hitherto been taken almost entirely from the counties of Gilpin, Clear Creek, Boulder, Park, and Summit. In those counties the mines not only show no signs of exhaustion, but are improving as greater depth is attained. In very few of them has there been sufficient development to give the advantages which have attended deep mining in other parts of the world. New mines are being constantly discovered in these oldest settled counties. Their ore product the past year has exceeded that of any former year. The treasures of the San Juan country were unheard of until within the past few years, and the rich placer claims in that locality are of more recent discovery. For want of reduction works and proper markets for ores, and on account of the great distance from railroads, and the enormous expense of transportation to and from this mining district, it has scarcely begun to contribute towards the mineral productions of the State. The past season has seen new works erected at various localities for the treatment of ores, railroads are pushing on towards the mines, toll roads are being rapidly constructed, and there can be no doubt that in a short time the broad, rich, and inexhaustible veins of San Juan will attract world-wide attention and add millions of dollars where they now add thousands to the annual ore product of the State.

* [It seems like a dream that in two short years (1881) that we have passed the two great States on the Pacific coast, and are to-day the foremost mineral State in the Union, having excelled that of California by over $3,000,000, and of Nevada by more than $6,000,000, in our mineral production.] From inaugural address of 1881.

Eighteen months ago Leadville was unknown, and the mines in that locality were undiscovered. To-day it is the most famous mining camp in the world.

From Wyoming to New Mexico our mountains are filled with inexhaustible treasures of silver and gold. While trade languishes and manufacturing industries are paralyzed in other States, the steady returns from our mines bring prosperity and contentment to the people. Capital judiciously invested in any of the mining districts of the State will bring better returns than if employed in most of the business ventures of the East. Within the next twenty years Colorado will become the largest mineral producing State in the Union.

STOCK INTERESTS.

Among the causes which have contributed to the prosperity of the State none have been more important than the stock interests. From the smallest beginnings they have increased year by year until now the proceeds from shipments to eastern markets amount to millions of dollars per annum. Probably no kind of investment in this country has proved more profitable, during the past ten years, than investment in the stock business in Colorado. During the entire year both cattle and sheep thrive upon the grasses of the valleys and the plains, the former requiring no hay or grain, and the latter only in cases of severe and unusual snow storms. The losses by death up to the present time have been very small, not usually exceeding two per cent. of the cattle, and not a much larger percentage of sheep. As the expenses of herding and caring for the stock are very light, the natural increase in the herds and flocks is mostly profit. No counties in the State are in a more prosperous condition than those which are chiefly devoted to stock raising.

Since the foregoing pages, which are a continuation of page 219, were put in print, we are called to record the death of Gov. F. W. Pitkin, which occurred Dec. 18, 1886.

THE LAST HONORS PAID TO THE DEAD GOVERNOR BY THE PEOPLE OF THE CAPITAL.

HUNDREDS OF VISITORS VIEW THE REMAINS IN THE EXECUTIVE CHAMBER
WHILE LYING IN STATE.

The last tokens of respect and honor that a loving people can bestow upon an honored and beloved citizen, were bestowed yesterday when the body of ex-Governor Frederick W. Pitkin was laid to rest at Riverside, Denver, Col.

DR. MOORE'S ADDRESS.

Rev. Dr. David H. Moore, in delivering the funeral sermon, spoke as follows:

The eulogy of Frederick W. Pitkin has been spoken by people and press. The tears that glisten on the cheeks of strangers whom his welcome has cheered, of the poor whom his bounty has fed, of his companions in society, of his associates in business, of political friends and political foes; the pause in the pleasures and pursuits of our metropolis; the great throngs on our streets; the hush and sorrow upon all hearts—these bear witness that no encomium could be too strong, no praise too great. There remains only the last services of our holy church, which we are here to render. Let me improve a few moments by pointing out three characteristic features of Governor Pitkin's life.

Passing by his natural endowments, we notice, first, that he made thorough preparation for his life work. The Nazarene fitted thirty years for the work of three years. Well would it be if our youth rebuked their impatience by considering this example. The best work, fastest work, most satisfactory work is done by those who have made the most thorough preparation. Mr. Pitkin appreciated this fact and added a collegiate training to the seminary course and a professional training to his seminary course. He was thoroughly furnished for his career and soon outstripped those, his equals in natural ability, but who were handicapped by inadequate preparation.

The second characteristic was indomitable energy. Energy is better than genius without it. Men who have the ability and willingness to work, are the men who win the decorations of every order. See young Pitkin working his way into a practice amid the fierce competitions of his Wisconsin home. Undismayed by abstracts, undaunted by discouragements, determined to deserve success. No wonder that a spirit so intense consumed its fleshly habitation. But though broken in health, he exhibited the same unbroken energy, crossing and re-crossing the ocean, climbing the Swiss Alps, sojourning in Florida, traversing our plains, and toiling with the hardy miners in the mountains, and with the sun-browned shepherds in the valleys of our own San Juan.

It is creditable that the people had eyes to see the worth of such a man, and the good sense, comparative stranger though he was, to exalt him twice to the highest office in their gift.

GUIDING THE STATE.

Through the most perilous experiences he safely and honorably guided our public affairs, displaying in every department of his multifarious duties the quenchless ardor of his tireless spirit.

But I hasten to notice the third and last characteristic of this noble life. Great as were the others, this surpasses both ; his Christian integrity. Just as he entered upon the practice of the law, he openly professed his faith in Jesus Christ, and united with the Methodist Episcopal Church. His piety was intelligent, unostentatious, and earnest. To him, as to every true disciple, Christianity was more than a profession—it was a life. It fed and enriched his whole being. It tranquilized his spirit, chastened his ambitions, nerved his purposes. It was the key-stone in the arch of his virtues.

The pall-bearers were : Judge W. E. Beck, Judge S. H. Elbert, Judge J. C. Helm of the Supreme Court, Governor Benjamin H. Eaton, Governor-elect Alva Adams, ex-Governor James B. Grant, Hon. Hugh Butler, and Col. L. H. Eicholtz.

EXTRACTS FROM COLORADO PAPERS.

Frederick W. Pitkin, the second Governor of the State of Colorado, was one of the very foremost men the public service of the State has known ; a gentleman by instinct and culture, a scholar and a statesman. Sympathetic in his nature and liberal in his views, he won a warm place in the hearts of the masses. He was eminently a man of the people, but was without a trace of demagoguery—a man of the people, as Garfield was, and in some of his characteristics he resembled him.

Probably no other man ever achieved so prominent a place in Colorado politics in so short a time. No other Governor of Colorado ever had so many vexed problems to solve as forced themselves upon Governor Pitkin during the two terms which he held the office. In the spring of 1879, the Rio Grande and the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railroad Companies were literally at war ; in the fall of that year the Ute outbreak occurred at the White River Agency. Major Thornburgh's command was attacked ; Father Meeker and all the male employees of the agency were murdered and the women captured.

Following close upon this exciting period came another opportunity for Governor Pitkin to show his prompt courage and clear judgment as an executive. In the spring of 1880, the famous Leadville strike occurred. The town of Leadville and the mining works near by were in danger of destruction, bodies of excited and armed men threatened one another in the streets of the town, and the Governor, feeling that peace was a necessity to the prosperity of Leadville, as well as of the entire State, proclaimed martial law for the protection of all classes.

In 1881 the Legislature of Colorado created a new county, and in honor of His Excellency named it Pitkin County. It is now the second mineral county in that, the largest mineral State in the Union. After an election of Gov. Pitkin to a second term by a majority much larger than any Governor of his State ever received before or since, he was, in 1883, a candidate for United States Senator, and received the largest vote each day in eleven days' balloting, lacking but three votes of a nomination, but withdrew his name on the eleventh day.

Kinsmen: It has been my province to here record the names and deeds of a remarkable family. None were born of better blood, and few families have achieved greater success, or carried themselves more nobly or honorably.

Will the coming generations emulate their example, and thus be ever an honor to the name?

Here we rest our plea, being mindful that St. Paul says genealogies are endless. — I. Tim. i, 4.
